SEEK 'VIOLA' IN BEACH MYSTERY

ONE DEATH FROM TORRID WAVE

GET FIRST DEGREE CLEW

I AM NOT VIOLA OF MALDEN

Miss Viola P. Walton declares to the AMERICAN that she is not the young woman who called at Fort Banks. Her denial deepens the Winthrop Beach mystery. There is a strong belief that the woman who called herself "Viola of Malden" was the victim of the tragedy.

DENIAL OF GIRL TANGLES POLICE

The finding by the AMERICAN of Miss Viola P. Walton of Boston, who was a friend of one of the soldiers at Fort Banks, Winthrop, and her explicit denial that she is the mysterious "Viola of Malden" who was at the Fort Heath entrance on a recent evening, made more tangled than ever today the strange case of the woman whose body was found floating off Winthrop Beach, near Ocean Spray station.

The elimination of Miss Viola P. Walton from the case forced the identification question back to the "Viola of Malden," the name that was given by a woman who approached Engineer John H. Rainey on sentry duty at Fort Heath and inquired for Corporal Arthur Merrill, formerly at Fort Heath but since out of the Coast Artillery Corps.

It is now felt that this unknown woman, who styled herself "Viola of Malden" is the dead woman, the victim of the tragedy.

But Corporal Merrill declares he never knew any "Viola of Malden" or any other place and that he never knew this dead woman either. He fails to recognize the body.

The removal of every marker's label or other identification mark from the woman's clothing seems more and more sinister as the mystery deepens. It might have been done by a woman with suicidal intent, to hide her name but it might have been done to conceal a crime.

The police declared the case was as baffling as the great Susan Geary "suit case" mystery, which resulted from the finding of a portion of a girl's body off the Winthrop shore.

Until today the police thought the woman whose body was discovered in the water off Ocean Spray early yesterday might be Miss Walton. Some of her friends—among them Sergeant Millard J. Parkey of Fort Banks, in Winthrop—thought the dead woman's description fitted her perfectly. The similarity of sound of her name to that of the "Viola of Malden" seen at Fort Heath caused the police to think the two were the same person.

The locating of Miss Walton by an AMERICAN reporter exploded this theory, and set the police in a new hunt to learn something of the strange "Viola of Malden."

The Malden police were called in to aid Metropolitan Inspector Maurice Finn, who is heading the investigation at Winthrop. The authorities of New England cities generally

FIND NEW CARMAN EVIDENCE

NEW YORK, July 17.—District Attorney Smith of Nassau County today announced the discovery of new evidence against Mrs. Florence Carman, who is accused of shooting to death Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of Dr. Edward Carman at Freeport. He declared that this evidence strengthened the cause against Mrs. Carman, and that he might ask the next Nassau Grand Jury to bring in an indictment charging murder in the first degree.

Such an indictment would supersede that voted by the Grand Jury late yesterday. That bill charged manslaughter in the first degree. Death in the electric chair is the penalty for murder in the first degree.

"If the new clews turn out as good as they promise now I shall certainly ask a superseding indictment," said the District Attorney. He made this statement after receiving a report from Burns detectives, who have been working on the case.

READY WITH BAIL.

While Mrs. Florence Carman calmly awaited for a summons to court for arraignment on an indictment charging her with manslaughter word was taken to her that her friends were ready to offer bail in the sum of $150,000 to secure her liberty.

Dr. Carman announced that either Ernest Rudolph, one of the most extensive property owners in Freeport, or Smith Cox, a wealthy and retired business man—both neighbors of the Carmans—will go on the accused woman's bail bond.

He declared further that John Graham, former surrogate of Nassau county, would defend Mrs. Carman, with George M. Levy, her present attorney, as advisory counsel.

The prisoner showed no signs of emotion when Attorney Levy carried to her the report that the Nassau County Grand Jury had indicted her late yesterday and would hand up the true bill to Judge Van Siclen today.

"VICTIM WANTED."

"It is no more than I expected," she said. "The public clamored for a victim and a victim was found. I

Warrant Issued for Fred Darmer

Mrs. Orina J. Chase of No. 49 Brook avenue, Roxbury, was today granted a warrant in the Dorchester court against Fred Darmer of No. 191 Pearl street, Somerville, whom she charges with enticing her daughter from home. Darmer, is twenty-one. The girl, Gladys B. Chase, is fourteen. Since January the girl lived with her sister, Mrs. Leon H. Adams, at No. 41 Dix street, Dorchester.

Russians Fire on German Balloon

NEIDENBERG, East Prussia, July 17.—The German military Zeppelin dirigible balloon Z4 was fired upon today by Russian troops when it crossed the Russian border near here. The Z4 was upon a military mission at the time and the commander evidently did not realize that he had crossed the frontier. The balloon returned to German soil unhurt.

Safford Appeals on Conservators' Bill

An appeal against allowing the conservators' account of the estate of Nathaniel M. Safford, wealthy retired Milton man, was filed today in the Supreme Court by Safford and his wife, Ethel M. Safford. The account, which showed expenditures of $37,412, was allowed June 17 in the Norfolk Probate Court. The conservators are Henry V. Cunningham and Joseph W. Bartlett.

Bar Immigrant for Having Short Leg

Colonel George Billings, Commissioner of Immigration, today said that the debarment from entry of Robert Powis, an Englishman, who arrived Wednesday on the Laconia, was because it was feared he might become a public charge. One of Powis' legs is shorter than the other. He has deformed hips, chest and curvatures of the spine, according to the immigration officials.

HUMIDITY CAUSE OF SUFFERING

Boston today suffered the first real troubles of sure-enough summer, and all because old Doctor Humidity was on the job just 91 per cent. worth. This is 21 per cent. above normal or within 5 per cent. of rain, which is some blanket of humidity over the fair city.

One death from the heat was reported early today. Manuel Silva, fifty years old, was overcome while at work in a shed at No. 329 Commercial street, and died while being taken in an ambulance to the relief hospital.

Boston was at 10 a. m. the hottest place in New England, according to the weather forecaster. The mercury at that hour registered 83. The humidity still hovered around the ninety mark.

While Bostonians sweltered, the people in Havre, Montana, felt comfortable in furs, the thermometer registering 42. Sheridan, Wyoming, was a degree colder. Up at Eastport, Me., where it is always cool, the thermometer was at the 58 mark at 10 a. m.

The local forecast for today is: Probably local showers this afternoon or tonight; Saturday, fair, fresh southwest winds; little change in temperature till Sunday.

The hottest July 17 on record in Boston was in 1900, when 95 degrees was recorded, but testimony from Ye oldest inhabitant of that aeronauseous year is to the effect that no one felt half the discomfort that day as was felt by folks today. For this blame old Doctor Humidity.

BIG BOUT FRAME-UP CHARGED

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, July 17.—There was a revulsion of public feeling today over the outcome of the world's championship prize fight last night between Georges Carpentier of France and "Gunboat" Smith, the American "white hope."

Whereas Smith had been universally denounced immediately after the contest for fouling Carpentier, the sober second thought which followed today made the American boxer out a victim of circumstances.

The dissatisfaction over the result of the scheduled twenty-round contest for the white heavyweight championship will probably result in the men meeting again.

James Buckley, manager of Smith, declared that he is eager to match the gunner against the French fighter "on almost any terms."

SMITH'S OWN STORY.

"I just want to prove that Smith is the better man and that he did not get a square deal last night," said Buckley.

This sentiment was strongly supported by Smith. He said:

I want another crack at Carpentier. I am willing and ready to fight him any time, tonight, next week, next month. I have repeatedly explained to my friends since the fight how it came about that Referee Eugene Corri gave the decision to the Frenchman. He acted in haste and, anyhow, he did not see, or did not realize, what had really happened.

Carpentier had made a vicious swing at me which just missed my jaw. As the Frenchman's glove whizzed by my chin I saw my opening and struck out my right with such force that, when the blow landed it whirled me half way around. I thought for a minute I had smashed my fist. The Frenchman went down but Corri evidently thought that

Fog Again Delays Cup Trial Race

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 17.—For the first time since the official trials of the America's cup began here the three yachts—Resolute, Defiance and Vanitie—had fair weather and a good breeze when preperations were begun this morning for today's race.

The "jinx" got busy about 11 o'clock, however, and a heavy fog rolled over the harbor. A signal postponing the race was hoisted.

Believe Man and Boy Were Drowned

MANCHESTER, July 17.—Clarence Crowley, thirty-two, and his nephew, Joseph Shea of South Boston, who was visiting him here, are believed to have been drowned while fishing from the rocks at Gale's Point. The pair have been missing since yesterday noon. It is believed that the boy, but twelve years old, slipped overboard, and that Crowley was drowned trying to rescue him. A search with grappling irons is being made.

FIND SUICIDE NOTE IN BOTTLE ON THE BEACH

A suicide note in a girl's hand, addressed to "Jack" and signed "Alice," is in the Dorchester police station, and the Dorchester officers are trying to solve the mystery.

The note was in a ginger ale bottle picked up by James Craige, a boy of thirteen, on the beach near Lawley's shipyards. Craige lives at No. 58 Port Norfolk street, Dorchester. He was unable to remove the cork from the bottle, so smashed it. Inside this paper was wrapped the note which read:

"Dear Jack: I thought it best to depart from this cruel world.

(Signed) "ALICE."

ASK RECEIVER FOR NEW HAVEN RAILROAD BY SUIT IN EQUITY

A bill in equity asking for the appointment of a receiver or master was today filed in the Massachusetts Supreme Court against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and its directors by Herman L. Whipple of the law firm of Whipple, Sears & Ogden.

The bill of complaint declares that the defendants, on account of breach of directors' duty and through causing the New Haven to acquire illegally its Boston & Maine, trolley and steamship properties, are bound to restore to the New Haven $12,000,000 withdrawn therefrom wrongfully and for ultra vires and illegal purposes.

It is alleged that the losses resulting from these acquisitions approximate $12,000,000, and that under the federal anti-trust act the New Haven is entitled to recover from the defendants threefold that sum—or an amount which figures up to $36,000,000.

NOVEL AIM SOUGHT.

The most novel aim of this latest civil action against the New Haven and its manipulators, which asks for a prompt settlement of the claims of all New Haven stockholders, is to make all adjustments subject to court dictation and to have the master or receiver entirely under court control.

It is felt that such a course will lend dignity to the proceeding, insure unity and fairness and prevent confusion and disorganized attack and litigation.

But the chief aim under the Whipple proceeding is to guard against the demoralizing effect ordinarily following the appointment of a receiver. Counsel made it clear today that what they sought was not a receiver in the common sense of the term, but a special master who would be immune to outside and conflicting purposes and interests, and be swayed only by the calm and deliberate directions of the highest tribunal in the State.

Counsel emphasized the fact that they did not consider the New Haven bankrupt; that it was paying its costs, and that the equity action would serve as a solution to the scattered claims and demands and serve as a bureau of relief for all those having grievances and claims to be heard.

RETURN ANSWER FRIDAY.

A writ was issued by Judge Bralley, it is returnable on Friday, July 24, and commands the directors to appear and show cause why the special master or receiver should not be appointed and attachments made.

The plaintiffs are Ralph S. Bartlett of Boston and Amelia Shapleigh of West Lebanon, Me., trustees under the will of the late Mrs. Ole Bull Vaughan, daughter of the famous Norwegian violinist, the contest of whose will dealt with the mysterious and occult powers of the Swami cult in India.

They hold forty shares of New Haven stock which Mrs. Vaughan inherited from her mother, Sara C. Bull. In their bill of complaint they say suit was brought "in order to enforce certain liabilities which they are informed and believe have accrued in favor of the corporation against certain of its present and former directors, which claims said directors and the corporation have hitherto failed and neglected and now decline to prosecute. They bring this suit in behalf of all the stockholders (there are 60,000) of said corporation who may desire to join therein and become parties thereto."

STOCKHOLDERS ASK CONFERENCE WITH FOLK ON MONDAY

NEW YORK, July 17.—A mysterious tangle was added to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad situation today when Alvin C. Cass, a well-known attorney, telegraphed to Solicitor Folk of the Interstate Commerce Commission asking for an appointment on Monday for a conference in behalf of the stockholders of the New Haven system. Attorney Cass refused to explain his purpose in asking for a conference or to reveal what plan, if any, he wished to discuss with Mr. Folk.

"That will have to wait until next week," he said. "I am not prepared to say anything now."

The decision of the New Haven directors to oppose the Massachusetts mandate for the location of the Boston to Maine from the New Haven had little effect on the road's stock today. It opened at 59¼ and held firm around that point. Financial circles believe that the government will bring suit against the New Haven, but do not anticipate any immediate action.

POLICE THINK BEACH MYSTERY GIRL WAS SLAIN

have been asked to help solve the puzzle of the identity of the Winthrop death victim.

POSSIBLE MURDER THEORY.

The police admitted they were still in the dark as to whether the woman died by accident, was a suicide or came to her end through foul play. They said, however, that many things gave reason to the murder theory.

They declared the woman might have been struck during a terrific struggle with an assailant—or, by reason of possibly elsewhere displaced little or no belief in the theory that she might have fallen or jumped or been thrown from a passing steamship. They explained that the fact that the woman's body had not been long in the water practically made this impossible.

Inspector Flinn said the woman had apparently not been in the water more than an hour and a half. He said today:

"What we want most to know besides her name is what took place between midnight and 2 a. m. When we know this we will know whether or not she was murdered."

Noises heard by a Winthrop patrolman and a Narragansett gateman at the Locust street crossing within a few hundred feet of where the body was found at earliest water were declared important links in the chain of incidents the police are attempting to forge. The policeman thought the sounds had been made by burglars, and the gateman crossing tender investigated, but neither crossed the Shore Drive to look at the beach, and the police say it is possible that the woman received the blow across her forehead at that time.

LABELS REMOVED.

The woman's underclothing was torn. Her hair was disheveled. The makers' labels had been removed from her waist and coat. All these facts put together at least gave a hint of foul play, the police said.

Medical Examiner Leary, who performed the autopsy, gave no opinion as to suicide, accident or murder. He simply said that death was from drowning, but said emphatically that the blow was received before the body entered the water.

Inspector Flinn searched the beach as far as Fort Heath in the hope of discovering a hint there was gone on the lead when the body was found—of freight blood spots or other clues. His efforts were in vain. Today he continued his search among the rocks and the forts, thinking he might learn of some woman who answered the description of the dead victim.

Superintendent West of the Metropolitan police, who is directing the work of Flinn and the men under him, declared the numbers found on one shoe—"1410" and "267905"—might prove of value. He said the false teeth and the gold filling in a lower tooth might bear fruit if a general inquiry were conducted among Greater Boston dentists.

"She must have been a striking figure," said the Inspector. "Once seen she would never be forgotten.

HANDS WELL KEPT.

"She was apparently not a working woman. Her hands were soft and well cared for. Her stature was unusual. She had practically no eyebrows. Her nose was prominent. There was a slightly gray patch of hair just above the forehead. I think any person who has seen her will give a clue to it shortly."

The case attracted widespread interest today. Scores went to the morgue in the hope of seeing the remains. Some said they thought they would be able to identify the woman. Most of them went out of curiosity.

DECLARES WINTHROP VICTIM LOOKS LIKE "VIOLA OF MALDEN"

John H. Rainey, engineer in the Seventh Company, C. A. C., at Fort Heath, went to the City Hospital morgue with an AMERICAN reporter and after looking at the body of the mystery victim, said he felt practically certain it was the woman who had approached him Monday or Tuesday night—he could not recall exactly which night it was—and said she was "Viola of Malden."

This was the name which was later thought to be "Viola P. Walton," and which today was found to be wrong.

Engineer Rainey has been on sentry duty at the fort for some time. This is his story:

"I think on Locust street at Ocean Spray," I told Rainey.

"If I see him shall I tell him who asked for him?" I added.

"Just tell him it was Viola of Malden," she said as she turned back towards the Highlands.

"That's the way I understand it "Viola of Malden." It may have have been some last name she gave me, but it sounded like "or Malden." It never struck me that she might have given me her last name and that I had mistaken it for her home city.

Rainey said it was raining when the woman appeared at the fort, and hence he did not have an opportunity of getting a good view of her. He said he could not distinguish the color of her clothing.

Inspector Flinn considered this as the first clew in his hunt to identify the woman of mystery. It was this clew that led him to talk with Merrill, whom he found at his home on Locust street.

Engineer Rainey was at the morgue about fifteen minutes. He took a good look-up to the lined body.

"I would not swear that was the woman that came to me and asked for Merrill," he said, "but I feel practically certain about it."

The morgue officials said they considered Rainey's examination had resulted in a "partial identification."

The mystery then turned on the identity of "Viola of Malden."

SERGEANT WHO GAVE WALTON CLEW UNABLE TO IDENTIFY VICTIM

Sergeant Millard J. Parkey of the Seventh Company, C. A. C., Fort Banks, gave the police the key—as they believed, until the AMERICAN found Miss Walton—to the "Viola of Malden" mystery—the mystery without a mystery.

Parkey was asked:

"Do you know any girl named Viola who has been at the fort at any time?"

"That name sounds familiar, but it is not of any girl who has been here," he said. "Why do you ask?"

Inspector Flinn explained.

"What kind of a girl is this Viola you refer to?" asked Parkey.

Flinn gave the sergeant the description of the Winthrop mystery.

"That answers the description of a girl I know well enough," exclaimed Parkey.

Parkey went on:

"The girl I knew lived at Revere some years ago. Her name is Viola. I went with her seven years ago. Yes, I know her well.

"Her full name was Viola P. Walton."

"Viola of Malden!" ran through the minds of Flinn and the reporters present.

They said they felt sure that Engineer Rainey had mistaken "Viola of Malden" for "Viola P. Walton"—that the girl who had called at the sentry house at Fort House last Monday or Tuesday night was none other than "Viola P. Walton."

WILL VISIT MORGUE.

Parkey continued:

"That was her name—Viola P. Walton. But his description fits her perfectly. The Viola I knew always wore white pointed shoes. She came from Nashua, N. H., where her mother is now. Some time ago I had a letter from her. That was the last time I heard from her. It was postmarked at the Essex street station.

I went with her every day of the general delivery at the Essex street postoffice. She had asked me if I would like to meet her. I said she was interested in. I could not, owing to my duties at the fort.

"She was a splendid girl. She was petite and chic. The last I knew of her she was living in Revere and at Nantasket for the Summer. The description can give me of the dead woman fits the girl to a T."

Early today Parkey went to the morgue, but was unable to identify the body.

Arthur Merrill, former corporal of the guard at Fort Heath, saw the mystery victim's body at the City Hospital morgue.

"I can't say it is the woman before," he said.

Merrill was asked to explain how it was that the mysterious "Viola" had used his name to Engineer John H. Rainey at Fort Heath on Monday or Tuesday night.

CANNOT EXPLAIN.

"I can't explain it," said Merrill, "unless some one at the fort gave my name to this woman, possibly as a joke. I never knew any Viola. I never knew the woman whose body I saw at the morgue."

Merrill lives at No. 52 Locust street, Ocean Spray. It was on the beach within a 100 feet of the end of this street that the body was found.

"The first I knew of the finding of the woman's body was when I read of it in the AMERICAN. I don't know any girl of the description given me, and don't know any girl whose first name is Viola," said Merrill.

MISS WALTON TELLS AMERICAN SHE ISN'T "VIOLA OF MALDEN"

Miss Viola P. Walton was found at her home in Boston by an AMERICAN reporter.

"Dead!" she exclaimed. "Oh, no, I am very much alive. A friend of mine read the story of the finding of the body at Winthrop in the AMERICAN. The description given of the woman struck him as astonishingly like one of myself.

"He called me on the telephone to tell me about it. My weight, height, complexion and hair are about the same and there may be one or two other similarities."

"Did you ever know Sergeant Parkey at Fort Banks?" she was asked.

"Oh, yes, that was six years ago. I was then living on Prospect avenue, at Revere."

"Are you the mysterious 'Viola of Malden,' Miss Walton?"

"Absolutely not," she said emphatically.

EAST BOSTON CHILDREN WIN RIGHT TO PARK

As a result of an appeal by 115 boys and girls to the Boston AMERICAN, Chairman John H. Dillon of the Park Commission today ordered the wire fences removed from Putnam Square Park, East Boston, and hereafter the children will have the privilege of using this breathing spot as a playground and rest place. The park is bounded by Trenton, White and Putnam streets.

The fences were put on following an appeal to Mr. Dillon by ex-Alderman George Battis and others of East Boston and the receipt of a number of letters by the chairman asking that the park be opened.

Mayor Curley refused to close the park at the request of the residents, declaring that any disturbance of the peace caused by playing children was a matter for the police. A petition sent to the AMERICAN by the children was presented to Mayor Curley, and following a conference between the Mayor and Chairman Dillon, the Park Commission took prompt steps today to have it made possible for the children and others to henceforth have free access to the park.

GLORIOUS SURPRISES IN STORE FOR YOU SUNDAY AFTERNOON AT REVERE

The AMERICAN today issues an invitation—and it is an invitation that includes everybody—to come to Revere Beach next Sunday afternoon to see Clifford Webster. You who come will see Webster perform feats that for sheer compelling interest, and for appeal to our love of thrills will exceed anything ever seen before in daredevilry.

The flight is to be a series of glorious surprises. And just because there are to be surprises, you will not be told of them today, nor tomorrow. But in the Sunday AMERICAN you will be told just what to expect, and you will be told something else.

You will be told how a keen eye, a little common sense, and a moment's thinking will mean a substantial addition to your bank account.

The AMERICAN'S chief purpose in arranging these flights by Webster is to bring home to the people who have never been in an airship, the exciting simplicity of the thing. Its purpose is educational. For century on century—even for aeons that stretch into the dim ages when we swung through the forests by finger and toe and prehensile tail as the monkey does today, man's chiefest desire has been to fly. Frimeval man, wrinkling his slant brow in wonder at the terrific world against which he set his puny strength, saw with envy that in the air was safety, and comparative peace. Giant sabre-toothed, huge cave-bears, the prehistoric mammals whose hideous forms affright our eyes in the museums today—these creatures roamed the land and made the level a place of frantic fear.

LONGED TO FLY.

In caves man found a measure of safety. In the trees he could avoid many of his foes. But the huge, climbing cats followed him there, and great apes contested with him the right of way. But in the air above, that space like man saw safety, and longed with a great longing for the ability to fly.

The ancient Greeks had a legend that one Icarus, envying the eagles, fashioned for himself wings of plumes and wax. He and his son donned these pinions and fluttered aloft to the very eye of the sun—where too great heat melted the wax that molded their wings, and they were dashed to death below.

The history of science's attempts at flight goes back hundreds of years. But the history of actual flight dates only a little over ten years—and is now but just begun.

In fifty years, it is a safe venture that aeroplanes will have copied from common usage the automobile—perhaps also the ocean liners. With the tremendous speed they will generate, these huge machines of the future will make London as close to New York as Boston is today.

MUST HAVE SPEED.

The imagination finds itself baffled in attempts to figure the future of the air. Speed we will have—long journeys safe and swift. Even now they are planning to bridge the Atlantic in a three-day flight. And another field the flying ship will open—the field of the heavens—the heights above the air. Even now men in tiny machines are circling and banking, circling and banking skyward to a height of five miles above the sea. Men who have gone so high and safely have returned sometimes tell strange stories of what they found there. Kipling, and H. G. Wells, and Irwin have peopled those upper areas with creatures of a strange and diverse sort, and have in fiction mirrored forth their own imaginings of what some day man may find.

But no one knows. The great Mystery attracts and cements our imagination to the dream of flight. The Age of the Air is at hand—and it is time each man and woman knew more intimately the science of the air. It is with the purpose of helping along this study that these flights by Webster have been arranged.

PLANE NEVER FAILS HIM.

There are certain things an aeroplane can do. It can rise. It can swoop downward. It can circle and bank and turn again. It can dive, can "loop the loop," can startle the heart of man by its cavortings. Many aeroplanes can do these things. But the Burgess-Dunne plane, which Webster flies—which he will fly at Revere Beach, Sunday—goes one step further. It is automatically stable. It cannot overturn. It is as safe from turning turtle as an automobile.

It is this quality of the Burgess-Dunne which distinguished it above all other flying machines. Webster demonstrates this quality in his flights in the simplest way. He lifts his hands from the steering levers, holds them high over his head, and allows the careening plane to drive on its way through the strata of the air unhindered by his hand. And the plane never fails him. It is as steady as a dancing floor—swings in its great swooping circles, or glides over the billows of its flight with never a dip to right or left—steady and secure.

If you come to Revere Sunday—and you will come, for you are part of a million people came July 4, and just as many thousands came to Nantasket, spite of the rain, last Sunday—you will see all these things that Webster does.

Sunday afternoon the flights will take place. Sunday afternoon, at Revere Beach, and between 2 and 6 of the afternoon. Come, see, study—and perhaps have a part in the very delightful surprise the AMERICAN has prepared for you.

MISS MYRNA SHARLOW of the Boston Opera Company, who scored a hit in the first production of "Francesca a Rimini" in London.

Roslindale Family Flees from Flames

The family of John E. Taylor of No. 147 Ashland street, Roslindale, was driven to the street early today when a fire of unknown origin was discovered in their home. The blaze was discovered by Patrolman Barrett, who awakened the family.

Composer Lehar Wins Slander Suit

VIENNA, July 17.—Franz Lehar's slander suit against the Rumanian composer, Popescus, who charged that Lehar was using Popescu's compositions for his operetta, "Endlish, alien," ended here triumphantly for Lehar.

MISS SHARLOW BIG SUCCESS IN LONDON OPERA

Myrna Sharlow, the Boston girl who stepped into Melba's place at the opera here last Winter and made a sensation in continuing to forge toward the top of the operatic ladder, Miss Sharlow yesterday sang the lyric soprano role in the first performance of Zandonai's new opera, "Francesca da Rimini," at the Royal opera in Covent Garden, London.

The Francesca performance was the climax of the London opera season. Martinelli, the celebrated tenor, sang the part of Paolo, Edvina sang the title role, and Miss Sharlow's part is almost equally important. She made a very favorable impression.

Miss Sharlow has had hard luck since she went to London until this time. Upon the very first day of the season, when the King and Queen were present, Melba was scheduled to sing in "Boheme," the same opera which she failed to sing in Boston. Melba was taken ill the day before the performance and the Covent Garden authorities summoned Sharlow from Paris. She arrived and was ready to go on when Melba suddenly recovered and went through the opera successfully. Had Sharlow sung she would have stepped at once into the rank of world famous sopranos. She has come into her own, however, with Francesca. Miss Sharlow will return to the Boston Opera this season, singing very important parts.

Young Militant Slashes Millais' Carlyle Portrait

LONDON, July 17.—Suffragettes' fury was again turned against art today. Annie Hunt, a young woman, entered the National Portrait Gallery and slashed Sir John Millais' oil portrait of Thomas Carlyle.

Special guards have been on duty at the National Portrait Gallery ever since pictures were smashed in the National Art Galleries. The woman failed to arouse their suspicion, and it was not until the noise of falling glass reached their ears that the attendants realized that suffragette damage was being done.

The woman was seized and turned over to the police. At the station she said she had gone to the portrait gallery with deliberate intention of doing all the damage she could in retaliation for the interest of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst last night. Mrs. Pankhurst was seized and taken to Holloway Jail.

6 ARE KILLED IN VIRGINIA TRAIN CRASH

NORFOLK, Va., July 17.—Six persons were killed and twenty-one were seriously injured early today in a collision between an electric train and a coal train on the Virginian Railroad at a crossing three miles from Norfolk. Two of the dead are Women, the others men.

The women were Miss Annie Meehan of Norfolk and Mrs. Ernest Gross of North Carolina. One of the dead men was supposed to be Professor Lee Hecht, a dancing master, who was missing. The others were finally identified as Joseph Cooper of Norfolk, J. D. Watson of Portsmouth, Va., and John Goodman.

The electric train, filled with merry-makers, was bound for Ocean View. Men and women were gaily singing when the train, which was made up of two big coaches, sped toward the tracks of the electric railway intersection at Fairmont Park where the tracks of the electric railway cross those of the Virginian Railroad. A coal train of seventy cars was passing the crossing on the Virginian Railroad and the safety gates were down, but the electric train was making such speed that the motorman could not control it in time to prevent a crash.

Detectives Trail Society Raffles at Nantasket Beach

Private detectives employed by hotel owners are today reported to be on the trail of a society "Raffles" who is blamed for several mysterious robberies at Nantasket Beach. Much jewelry has been stolen and a close watch is being kept on the pawn shops in Boston in the hope of catching the thief attempting to dispose of the loot.

The two latest thefts were reported by Mrs. L. F. Collins and Mrs. P. P. Pretti, guests at the Hotel Nantasket, who claim their rooms were ransacked. Among the articles stolen from Mrs. Collins were a gold watch with the initials "N. G. S." on the case, a woman's turquoise ring, an onyx ring with the letter "S" on the stone, a moonstone ring, two gold wedding rings, a gold ring, a gold chain and a pair of gold cuff buttons. Mrs. Pretti lost a pocketbook containing a sum of money.

Duchess Settles Custody Fight

LONDON, July 17.—The suit of the Duchess of Westminster for the custody of her two daughters has been settled. The court decided that the original arrangement whereby it was agreed that each parent should have the children for six months in the year should stand.

WOMAN HAS PROVEN SELF, SAYS BRYAN

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Secretary Bryan, in a statement enlarging on his stand for woman suffrage, declared that he would ask no political right for himself that he was not willing to grant his wife and announced his intention of supporting the proposed State constitutional amendment extending the franchise to women, to be voted on in Nebraska next November.

Woman, Mr. Bryan said, had proved herself equal to every responsibility imposed upon her. Above all other arguments in favor of giving her the ballot he placed the right of the mother to a voice in the moulding of the environment of her children.

"The mother," the Secretary said, "can justly claim the right to employ every weapon for the protection of those whose interests she guards, and the ballot will put within her hands all of the instrumentalities of government, including the police power.

"As man and woman are co-tenants of the earth and must work out their destiny together, the presumption is on the side of equality of treatment in all that pertains to their joint life and its opportunities. The burden of proof is on those who claim for one an advantage over the other in determining the conditions under which both shall live."

Filene's

Uncle Sam a Right Smart Business Man

IF EVERY municipal and state government in the land, every railroad company and every business house, were conducted with a degree of "parsimony" even approaching that characterizing the conduct of United States governmental affairs—the postal department for example—billions of dollars would be saved wage-earners and taxpayers annually.

THAT which we are apt to call "parsimony" on Uncle Sam's part is really nothing but good business. It rests fundamentally upon these principles:

—buying the best of everything that is needed and buying nothing that is not needed;

—paying the lowest possible prices consonent with such quality;

—asking the lowest possible prices for that which is dispensed in the most economical way possible.

Thus it is that Uncle Sam distributes postal matter more efficiently and more economically than Tom, Dick or Harry could distribute it.

Thus he recently has demonstrated what good business can do in the way of delivering parcels at postal rates.

Doubtless he could do quite as well in maintenance of a national system of merry-go-rounds or governmental gumdrop works.

STATESMEN dream and talk of applying even better methods to the conduct of affairs national.

Meanwhile the lank old gentleman of striped trousers and chin-whisker proceeds along the even tenor of his economic way. And, somehow or other, nobody succeeds in doing good things better than he does them.

NOW all of this is due to something other than accident. It traces back to the fundamentals recited in the adjoining column. Every year more and more business houses see the light and follow in its path. We saw it a good many years ago.

Perhaps in doing business about as Uncle Sam does it we have developed new policies that have been of service when adopted in Washington. That's neither here nor there. They have made for wider economies and better service to our public—which is enough for us.

FREQUENT wonder is expressed that the Filene store can maintain so fine a physical establishment, accord so many creature comforts to its guests, give so uniformly square a deal to those making up its organization, and yet undersell its competition so radically and so persistently.

There isn't an ounce of parsimony or mystery in the whole procedure, just as there is none in Uncle Sam's postal and parcel delivery services.

But, as in the case of Uncle Sam, there's a deal of good business back of it—good business because both we and our public profit.

Just now every floor of this bright store abounds in examples of how Filene's and Uncle Sam do things.

ANXIOUS WIFE WAITS HUERTA ON CRUISER AT PUERTO MEXICO

PUERTO MEXICO, July 17.—The special train bearing General Huerta to this city has been delayed at several points, according to word by the local officials today, and may not arrive until late this afternoon.

This word was immediately transmitted to Senora Huerta, who had been anxiously awaiting news of her husband's safety in her cabin aboard the British cruiser Bristol.

The German cruiser Bremen moved closer to shore today. It is believed that this is the vessel on which Huerta will seek asylum. A member of Senora Huerta's party intimated today that Huerta would go to Jamaica instead of to Europe. General Blanquet probably will accompany him.

SAN LUIS POTOSI TAKEN.

SALTILLO, July 17.—San Luis Potosi, one of the most important railroad centres of Mexico, has been captured by rebels, according to reports from Constitutionalist headquarters today. It was stated that Federals evacuated the city Wednesday morning.

MONTEREY, Mexico, July 17.—General Carranza received a long dispatch from Mexico City last night and immediately called his cabinet into session. The message was not revealed, but a leading official of the Carranza government expressed the opinion that negotiations would soon be under way for the establishment of Carranza as provisional President at Mexico City. This can be effected by President Carbajal appointing Carranza as his foreign minister and then resigning.

CARBAJAL FOR PEACE.

MEXICO CITY, July 17.—Provisional President Carbajal announced today that he had invited heads of the various warring factions of Mexico to come to the capital to confer on the best methods of effecting peace throughout the republic. Congress will be dissolved at once as the next step in terminating Huerta influence over the government.

"My sole labor will be to consolidate the nation," said the President.

General Velasco, who was defeated at Torreon by General Villa, took the oath of office as Minister of War today. The appointment is temporary and he will retire as soon as a man more satisfactory to the rebels can be found.

Ricardo Rebele, a Huerta supporter, has resigned as Attorney General.

MUST PROTECT FOREIGNERS.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Secretary of State Bryan today sent telegrams to Consuls Silliman, at Monterey, and Carothers, at Saltillo, instructing them to take up the question of protection of lives and property in Mexico with Generals Villa and Carranza.

PIMPLES SPREAD ON BODY AND FACE

Never Had Night's Rest. Clothing Irritated Eruption and Pained. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Didn't Have One Pimple Left.

6 Myrtle St., New Haven, Conn.—"My skin itched on my body and face which made me scratch and after I stopped scratching the skin remained very red. Hard little pimples also came out where I scratched. I never had a night's rest and as I continued scratching the pimples spread and got worse. After a month white points appeared on them. My clothing irritated the eruption on my body and gave me pain. Many nights I did not sleep; I could not move in bed for if I did they got worse.

"I used ointments and many kinds of ointment but they did not help my trouble. It was all money lost. I then sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after I had used them felt a little better so I bought more. I bathed first with the Soap hot water and night, afterwards dried and applied the Ointment. After three months' treatment I didn't have one pimple left." (Signed) Miss Rose Consigio, Apr. 2, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

Although the Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most successful in the treatment of affections of the skin, scalp, hair and hands, they are also most valuable for everyday use in the toilet, bath and nursery, because they promote and maintain the health of the skin and hair from infancy to age. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston.

MADAM CAILLAUX, wife of ex-Finance Minister of France, who goes on trial Monday for the slaying of Editor Calmette.

Crown Prince "in Bad" Over Telegram

BERLIN, July 17.—The Vossische Zeitung, quoting a section of Lieutenant-Colonel Frobenius' book, "Germany's Fateful Hour," so highly praised by the Crown Prince, which refers to Great Britain's "stealthy plans" to attack Germany at a favorable moment without a declaration of war, says: "Thanks to the Crown Prince's telegram, it will have certain success. It may be that official quarters may at last take steps for regulating the political demonstrations of the Crown Prince."

Pick Jury Today to Try Mme. Caillaux

PARIS, July 17.—President Albens of the Seine Assizes, in which Mme. Caillaux will go on trial Monday for the killing of Editor Calmette of the Figaro, today ordered the selection of a jury of twelve from the thirty-seven veniremen called.

Le Figaro publishes a letter which, it alleges, shows premeditation on the part of Mme. Caillaux. This note was written at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the shooting. It was handed to a maid with instructions that she should give it to M. Caillaux upon his return from the Senate.

The note in part stated:

"You said to me that you would smash the face of Calmette; but France and the republic have need of you, and you must not charge yourself with our quarrels; it is for me to act. If this is handed to you it will mean that I have acted."

The killing of Calmette was unintentional, it will be maintained by Maitre Labori, as Mme. Caillaux went to his office only with the idea of obtaining letters of a personal nature which Calmette was supposed to have in his possession, and if necessary, merely to frighten him.

RICHARDSON OR GALLIVAN FOR MAGRATH JOB

The names of Dr. Oscar Richardson of the Back Bay and of Dr. William J. Gallivan of South Boston were mentioned today in gossip about the physician Governor Walsh will name to succeed Dr. George H. Magrath as one of the medical examiners for Suffolk County.

The salary and fees are estimated between $5,000 and $6,000 a year. The position is responsible, as the medical examiner is an important witness in many capital and other criminal cases.

Dr. Oscar Richardson is one of the associate medical examiners, his term expiring in 1920. He is a graduate of Harvard Medical School, is assistant pathologist at the Massachusetts General Hospital and is a specialist in bacteriology and pathology. He is a member of the Boston Society of Medical Sciences and of the American Association of Bacteriology and Pathology. His office is at No. 483 Beacon street.

Dr. Richaddson has the endorsement of many prominent Boston physicians for the position. One argument advanced is that his present post as one of the associate medical examiners has made him familiar with the complicated legal-medical duties of the principal office.

Dr. William J. Gallivan, No. 742 Broadway, South Boston, is likewise a graduate of Harvard Medical school. He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society and has powerful political connections, being a brother of Congressman "Jimmy" Gallivan of the Twelfth District. A third brother, J. C. Gallivan of No. 359 Broadway, South Boston, is an undertaker.

Seize Liquor in 3 Rockland Raids

As a result of three police raids in Rockland last night three men are to be summoned to court on charges of having liquor illegally in their possession. The Phillips Pharmacy, the Hotel Thomas and the Rockland House were raided and liquor was seized in each place.

'PRO BONO' CLUB RESUMES NAME OF 'TAMMANY'

Decked out in a new coat of war paint and gilt, the dazzling degree of the cigar store Indian in its old place over the doorway proclaimed to passersby today that the Pro Bono Publico Club, Mayor Curley's organization, at No. 378 Dudley street, Roxbury, has dropped its campaign title to be known once more as the Tammany Club.

For years the club has been the headquarters of the Ward 17 friends of Mayor Curley. But as his mayoralty campaign progressed it was thought that a change of name for the club would be a move in the right direction.

After some debate among the members of the club it was decided to call the organization "Pro Bono Publico Club," meaning "for the public good."

When this change was made the famous old Indian was taken down and the curtains, on which appeared the name of the club, were rolled up.

The change of the name was the cause of much comment.

Today, however, it was noted that the name of the club was no longer "Pro Bono Publico," but the time honored "Tammany" instead.

"I AM NO LADIES' MAN," DECLARES DR. CARMAN IN ANSWER TO CHARGES

'WIFE INNOCENT,' SAYS HUSBAND OF ACCUSED

By VIOLA RODGERS.

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 17.—"When my wife goes on trial we won't need any of that 'unwritten law' defence, or the maudlin New York type of oratory. Her lawyer will be called upon to defend an innocent woman. He will have to deal only with the facts and the law. Therefore, I am hoping to be able to engage as the trial lawyer Surrogate Graham of Nassau County," declared Dr. Edwin Carman at the Mineola Courthouse today.

"My wife," he continued, "will have money enough at her command to be admitted to bail, even if the maximum amount is demanded. We still have loyal friends and we have funds enough to fight to the finish.

"My selection of Surrogate Graham would not be any reflection on Mr. Levy, our counsel up to this time, for, in my opinion, he has handled the case admirably. He would be retained as the attorney of record.

"NO LADIES' MAN."

"As for the district attorney and his collusion with William J. Burns, the detective, I think it is beneath contempt. There is absolutely no justification for the tramp with the conscience.' On all sides both Burns and the district attorney are being roundly scored. I say unequivocally he is no 'tramp with a conscience,' but a Burns hoeler.

"There is an impression I want to correct right now. Ever since the shooting there have been stories to the effect that I am a 'great ladies' man.' I have never known a woman in all my life who cared for me; no, not one, outside of my wife.

"I do not think District Attorney Smith acted fairly when he failed to urge the Grand Jury to give Mrs. Carman a hearing. I know he appeal was delivered to Smith and in it she said:

"'I do not want your sympathy; all I want is a chance to tell the truth and in justice I ask you hear what I have to say.'

"We have both willing, too, to have our little daughter, Elizabeth, go before the Grand Jury. She would have been a fine witness for her mother, because she is too young to know the use of subterfuge. Poor child! she misses her mother very much; but we both thought it best to keep her away from prison, because the impression of her mother in a prison cell could never be effaced."

DENIES ESTRANGEMENT.

Dr. Carman characterized the reports of quarrel or estrangement between Mrs. Carman and her sister, Mrs. Powell, as preposterous.

"Demagogism and everything else are forgotten. My wife will never be deserted. We all feel the same way. She is a woman any man would be proud to call his wife and any child would be proud to call her mother."

When informed Dr. Carman has called the tramp witness a "Burns heeler," William J. Burns replied:

"All I can say is that I am sorry the operations of the law are such it is not possible to get hold of and punish the person who, while he did not actually commit the murder, is actually responsible for it."

SMITH IS SATISFIED WITH JURY'S VERDICT IN FREEPORT CASE

FREEPORT, L. I., July 17.—"Are you satisfied with the Grand Jury's action?" District Attorney Smith was asked.

"I guess I have to be, whether I want to be or not," he replied with a smile.

"How about application for bail? Will you oppose such application?" he was asked.

"I do not intend to," he answered. "This case is about finished for the present. The testimony was quite satisfactory to me. Nothing was brought out to contradict Frank Farrell, the chap you fellows thought was a dub. He's no dub. You ought to hear him talk. Edwood Bardes is about through. I do not think we shall have further use for him. The grand jurors decided not to hear Mrs. Carman, and in my opinion, they did right. Personally, I am much opposed to any person charged with capital crime appearing before the Grand Jury considering his or her case.

"I think that you may safely presume that there was a verdict and that first degree murder was not the verdict. You may say that without fear of libelling any one.

"The return of an indictment automatically makes the postponed hearing of Mrs. Carman unnecessary. Levy and I have not discussed bail. That is discretionary with the court.

"The Grand Jury considered this case clearly and thoroughly. Some of those Grand Jurors were performing hard work—very hard. They knew either Mrs. Carman or her family, but they performed their duty like men—all of them.

"That Mrs. Carman was not brought before the Grand Jury is no indication that they did not want to treat her fairly. They received another appeal from her today. It was read by them, but even then she was denied her wish. I do not believe that she will think that the Grand Jury treated her unjustly.

"But understand me. Nothing has happened to make me change my ideas about this affair. I still have the same theory of just what happened and how it happened. I outlined my theory last Sunday and I still stand by it. This case is much stronger now than it was when we started to investigate. We do not depend upon any one witness. We have a mighty strong case against Mrs. Carman.

"We shall hold all the witnesses now in our care."

FRIENDS READY WITH BAIL FOR MRS. CARMAN

am grateful to my friends for their confidence in my innocence."

The latest sympathy felt for Mrs Carman by her friends burst into full flame today with the inauguration of a movement to compel District Attorney Smith to seek a superseding indictment against the prisoner before permitting her to be placed on trial. By this means it was proposed to force a trial for murder in the first degree instead of upon a manslaughter indictment. There was little belief that this movement would be successful.

Attorney Levy announced that as soon as the indictment was returned he would ask for his client's release on bail.

The District Attorney intimated that this demand would not be opposed. Dr. Carman was so confident that his wife would be released before night that he made plans to take her to a quiet resort in the mountains to stay until Fall, when the trial will be called.

The penalty fixed by law for manslaughter in the first degree is twenty years' imprisonment, but the general opinion among those who have been following the case is that the State will be unable to secure a more severe verdict than manslaughter in the second degree, for which the penalty is imprisonment for any term up to fifteen years or a fine of $1,000 or both. It would occasion no surprise if a verdict of acquittal were returned.

LOOKS FOR ACQUITTAL.

Dr. Carman today declared he was confident his wife would be acquitted and hinted that Mrs. Carman had received an offer of suspended sentence or a fine if she would enter a plea of guilty on the indictment charging manslaughter. It was common talk around the courthouse at Mineola that if an indictment charging murder in the first degree had been voted by the Grand Jury the defence would have been based upon the "unwritten law." In view of the fact that the jurors decided to charge a lesser crime the "unwritten law" may not be invoked.

When the Grand Jury adjourned yesterday after considering the indictment for two hours after the taking of testimony had closed, the true bill was sealed with the intention of handing it up to Justice Van Siclen today. Because of the pressure of earlier court arrangements, the justice notified District Attorney Smith today that he would be unable to take up he arraignment at Mineola before 2 p. m. today. That hour was accordingly set for the handing up of the indictment and the arraignment of Mrs. Carman. Her lawyer said she would plead not guilty. It was expected that bail would be set at $10,000 or $15,000.

The crime of manslaughter in the first degree is defined as "The taking of a life on the heat of passion in cruel or inhuman manner, or by means of a dangerous weapon without the design to effect death."

Dr. Carman has promised to let the newspaper men meet and talk with Mrs. Carman at her home tonight.

William Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, was seen at his home in Hempstead and declined to comment on the indictment. He was asked if he didn't feel that Mrs. Carman ought to have been indicted for first degree murder. "Perhaps," he replied, "I'll have something to say about it later today; that will surprise you."

VERDICT UNANIMOUS.

The jury reached their conclusion after somewhat more than two hours debate. Seventeen jurors were present, and they unanimously agreed upon a decision, though a finding by five-sixths of them would have been sufficient.

This is what they believed, after hearing all the testimony:

That Mrs. Carman had reason to be jealous of her husband because of information she had as to his affairs with other women.

That her feeling of jealousy was heightened by his conversations with women patients over the dictagraph which she secretly installed with one end in his office and the other in her bedroom.

That on the night of June 20, she listened to a talk between him and Mrs. Bailey and heard something which fanned her suspicion and jealousy into a sudden flame.

That thereupon she seized a revolver (how and where she obtained it being a matter for future investigation), and, infuriated, beyond control or reason, rushed downstairs and shot the woman she recognized as a rival.

Mrs. Carman did not appear before the Grand Jury to tell her version of the shooting. The indicting body, after reading two petitions asking that she be permitted to address them, declined to hear her.

It is no exaggeration to say that $500,000 could be raised in Freeport alone as surety for her within an hour, if such a sum were necessary.

HINT JURORS KINDLY.

...According to one story, the grand jurors really were actuated by kindly motives. They did not want the doctor's wife to cause before them and tell what they believed to be a lie.

They believed the stories told by the tramp, Farrell, who said he saw a woman break the glass of the doctor's window and fire a shot, and Celia Coleman, the maid, who swore Mrs. Carman ran in from the lawn just afterward and implored her to keep silence.

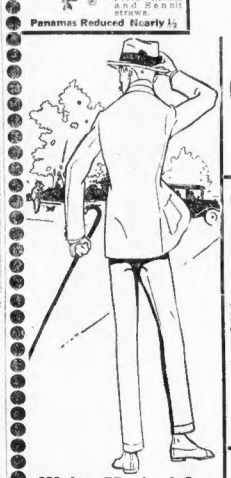
Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer



I heard the other day the story of the physician who was advisable a skin that all his women patients asked his secret. He told one who guessed it—that he used, knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mineralized wax, he concealed this substance under a most excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could do no injury, he began using it after shaving. He soon discovered that the oil, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This wax (the purest form of the silver-haired doctor with the youthful face) is known to druggists as Mercolized wax, and everywhere now mercolized wax, in quantities sufficient to remove ordinary blemishes, is being sold with the understanding that if not entirely satisfactory after ten days' use the money will be cheerfully refunded. An ounce of this wax, obtainable at any druggist, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable ingredient used by the doctor was a wrinkle-remover, and prescription is the form of a few tablespoonfuls of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This also has become famous. ADVERTISEMENT.

FOSS DEPLORES CURLEY'S MOVE TO SEIZE LAND

"I refuse to be the tail to anyone else's kite," former Governor Foss today commented on the suggestion that he donate to the city a plot of land at Hemenway street and Huntington avenue adjoining the Forsyth Dental Infirmary.

Mayor Curley has ordered the Board of Street Commissioners to seize the land by eminent domain and convert it into a park so that no building shall ever be erected to cut off the light from the infirmary. Former Governor Foss said today:

"I am willing to sell the land to the city for what it cost me. I have had many offers of more. But certainly I would not give it. The Forsyth Infirmary is not my memorial, and I refuse to be the tail of anyone else's kite. The Forsyth people appear to be wealthy and if they have put as much as they have into the Infirmary, they can spend a little more to preserve its usefulness.

"The lot contains 43,262 square feet and Mr. Foss offered to sell it to the city for $167,000. The offer was made on a 30-day option June 6, but Mr. Foss said he had received only fifty from Mayor Curley," he added.

"I purchased this property in 1908 on the suggestion of the late Samuel Warren, then president of the Art Museum. I took lunch with Mr. Warren one day at the Art Club and he told me of the quandary they were in at the Art Museum over the straightening of the street line. He said that the property opposite was owned by four men who would not agree to the proposition of the Art Museum to have the line straightened, which meant taking part of their land. He said the Art Museum did not have the money to purchase the lot and put the proposition up to me.

"I then purchased the property and gave the city a strip of the lot nearest the Museum necessary to straighten the street line and took from the city in exchange a strip on the other end of the lot."

SALEM BENEFIT AT B. F. KEITH'S SUNDAY NIGHT

Arrangements are being completed for the all-star concert and benefit for the Salem fire sufferers, to be given at B. F. Keith's Theatre, Sunday evening, under the auspices of the County Galway Men's Benevolent Association, a branch of the United Irish County Clubs of Greater Boston.

From present indications this affair promises to be one of the biggest events of the kind ever staged in Boston. Governor Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor Barry, Mayor Curley, Mayor Hurley of Salem, Mayor Good of Cambridge, Secretary of State Donahue, Attorney-General Boynton, State Treasurer Mansfield and State Auditor Pope will all be present.

The committee in charge of the benefit is composed of John J. Mullen, chairman; James M. Tuohey, Robert Garrity, Patrick Wallace and Patrick J. Mellody, president of the Central Council of Irish County Clubs.

Among the artists who have volunteered their services for the big concert are the famous Meistersingers, composed of the Harvard, Schubert and Weber Male quartets of Boston; Vaughn Comfort and John S. King, Bowman Brothers, Charles E. Mack, the celebrated boy choir from St. Joseph's Church, Somerville, under the direction of Bart E. Grady, Ethel Kirk and Billy Fogarty, Boothby and Everdean, Carle Stowe, the star of "The Man From Home," and many other well-known entertainers.

B. F. Keith's Theatre has been placed at the disposal of the committee by A. Paul Keith, and the entire receipts of the benefit will be devoted to the Salem fire fund. Seats are now on sale at the box office of B. F. Keith's Theatre.

'WHITE HOPE' BUG INVADES POLICE CELLS

John Murray's Alaskan bug, or Irish "Leprechaun," is loose again at Court square police station. Murray is the station janitor. He cleans out the cells that inebriates, tramps and others have occupied. By the nature of his job he knows a bug when he sees it.

A week ago Murray cleaned out a cell occupied by an Alaska sailor. He found this bug. Here is Murray's description: "About the size of a half-dollar. Built something like a cockroach. Has 100 feet, each with a claw and each claw is barbed. Some bug."

Murray also called the bug a "Leprechaun," which is an Irish Goblin. When he spied the bug he grabbed at him, "Buggie" said "Safety first," and dived into a crack.

"I'll get you yet," said Murray, and he did. Yesterday he caught the bug and put him in a pasteboard shoebox, weighting the lid with a pound package of cleansing powder. He put the combination in the cellroom and waited for Captain "Jim" Sullivan to come in today to show him the bug.

Today Murray took "Cap'n Jim" down to the cellroom. The pound package and cover had been lifted off the box. The bug had escaped.

The news that such a "white hope" bug, who bucks his way out of a weighted box, is at large in the station makes a terrific hit with the patrolmen.

Moral—If you are going to get arrested today, don't do it in Court square precinct. The "Leprechaun" might get you in your cell.

BLAME TANGO FOR INCREASE OF DIVORCES

NEW YORK, July 17.—Monsieur and Madame Tango and all the little Tangoes were indicted yesterday and found guilty of being responsible for the 50 per cent. increase in divorces in this city within the past six months.

After the Tango family Mr. Hard Times came in for denunciation. Most of the judges and divorce lawyers were of the opinion that a cut in the income, such as many men have experienced in the past year, has caused love to fly out of the window.

"High Life" was blamed by some of the lawyers, especially those who come in contact with persons of fashion. "Lack of Family" also drew adverse criticism.

John F. McIntyre, who tries many divorce actions, said: "The tango craze is undoubtedly responsible for many family disagreements with their disastrous after effects."

Abraham Levy, another divorce expert, said: "The modern dances are, in my opinion, one of the most prolific sources of domestic dissatisfaction."

SAYS ROADS AND PACKERS PLOT TO KEEP MEAT UP

NEW YORK, July 17.—Charges that American meat packers and the railroads out of New York are in a gigantic conspiracy to ruin the independent meat packing interests of South America are made in two communications sent by A. H. Benjamin, representative of two of the largest South American meat packers. Mr. Benjamin declares the conspiracy is costing the consumers from three to five cents on every pound of meat that they eat.

Mr. Benjamin, in one communication, asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the action of the railroads because of their refusal to provide facilities for handling Argentine meat shipped to New York and the other requests the Department of Agriculture to interfere to stop the fight the American packers are making against the independents in London in an effort to destroy them and so get sole control of the South American meat supply.

When Summer Stops the Swing

Most of us can remember the school lesson in the law of accumulated motion—momentum.

If you exert a pound of pressure against a man in a swing, you'll start him moving slowly "to and fro." If you continue to exert a pound of pressure against him every time the swing makes a trip, you'll soon have him going so high that he almost turns the whole circle. If you stop pushing, the momentum will die out and the swing come to rest.

Winning trade follows the same natural laws.

Advertisements are the force behind the swing of public favor. Each new advertisement increases the momentum. Finally, the accumulated force of these numerous impulses swings indifference to the buying point.

If you stop advertising, you lose momentum.

The moral of which is:

Don't stop the business swing in Summer. Keep adding the pounds of advertising pressure.

The Rev. and Mrs. Samuel Smith Drury of Concord, N. H., have gone to Gardiner House, Bristol, R. I., for the summer. Mrs. Drury before her marriage was Cornelia Wolcott, only daughter of the late Governor Wolcott.

The all-important event in society today is the wedding of Miss Edith Roelker and Charles P. Curtis, Jr., which takes place, at the Summer home of the bride's parents at East Greenwich, R. I. The Misses Ellen Curtis, a sister of the bridegroom, Gertrude Amory, and Hope Thacher represent Boston in the attractive group of bridesmaids. The ceremony takes place at 5 o'clock in St. Luke's Church, and the reception will follow in the garden at Greene Farms.

Richard Curtis, Harvard '15, is best man, and the ushers include Bayard Warren, John S. Parker, William A. and Frederick Forbes, of Boston, Morgan Belmont and Carle Morgan of New York, Grinom Bettle of Philadelphia, and William Chatfield of Cincinnati.

Mrs. William Roelker is matron of honor, and Miss Anita Gracey of the only other attendant besides those already mentioned.

Mrs. Angle Delirious, Bites Her Own Arm

STAMFORD, Ct., July 17.—Mrs. Helen M. Angle broke down in her cell today and Dr. J. H. Staub advised that she be removed at once to a sanitarium. This was denied, but a trained nurse was engaged to watch her. Mrs. Angle did not recognize her father when she was taken to Chief Hoskins's office to meet him. While delirious she bit herself in the arm.

WALKER READY TO HEAD MOOSE TICKET IN FALL

Joseph Walker is now expected to be the Progressive candidate for governor this Fall, having sent word from Switzerland that he is at the service of the party for the coming campaign. Senator Charles E. Burbank, James P. Magenis and Alvan T. Fuller, who have been spoken of as possible candidates for Governor, have declined. Mr. Walker that the Progressives of the State would receive with enthusiasm his statement, they assured him their own support.

The situation will doubtless be talked over at the mass meeting the Progressives will hold Saturday afternoon in Wesleyan Hall.

Richard Washburn Child, a prominent Progressive, proposes a joint committee, consisting of three Republicans and three Progressives, be appointed by their respective State Committees to bring about a union of the two parties.

Matthew Hale, who is ill in Dublin, N. H., has been forbidden by his doctors to talk politics and does not know Charles S. Bird has refused to run.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD Says:

I want your first impression of the values here to be a favorable one.

For that reason I have instructed the management to select big lots of the high priced suits in the Oak Hall stock, and regardless of what they formerly sold at, they will be marked down to a price which will not be equalled anywhere else in the city.

These suits are not the inferior sort usually associated with low prices in "sales," but are well made garments that will give absolute satisfaction in every detail.

RED SOX FALL DOWN IN TIGERS' GAME WITH CHANCE TO CLIMB IN SIGHT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

THREE STAR BOUTS ON CARD AT CAMBRIDGE CLUB FOR FIGHT FANS TONIGHT

RED SOX LOST GREAT CHANCE TO GET GOING

By NICK FLATLEY.

There was an old chap named Sisyphus in the Hades League in the days before the U. S. crowd took charge of controversies, who relished by the umpire and allied the pleasant job of rolling a big stone up a high hill.

He would always get it nearly to within a hair's breadth of the pinnacle of each evolution, when his control would go, and the rock would roll right down. Then it was his assignment was to get it on top and make it stay put, he was under contract, and never worked it out.

The Red Sox these days are more or less like the old scrub. They get close enough to the top of the American League race. Then, when just a little push would put them there, slip, and down goes the toboggan.

They had the chance to win yesterday and roll today in second place. But they didn't. They chose to lose. From the moment that Dauss started shooting them over the Red Sox bats it was evident that only a shut-out or something nearly close to it could possibly put them in place jump all in one day. And sluggers like the Tigers indeed very seriously to be blanked.

COBB OUT OF IT.

Naturally the Tigers will be with us today—or at least we hope they will. They were not with us yesterday, they were very much astray. They haven't got Ty Cobb on the bench, like George Moriarty either. But this doesn't stop them from winning games and slugging a world of runs. They are so full of fight that at times they stumble over themselves going after the breaks.

But they don't throw away many chances. The one they hardly be said of the Red Sox. Right in the first inning yesterday they had the opportunity to start a little trouble.

Regh pried off the lid with a clean single. But instead of waiting and being pushed around toward home he suddenly conceived a wild notion to steal after the base was cleared. Ayer ord on the first ball pitched. He was out a mile and a second opening for the game that might have meant a victory was blown.

Later in the game the same individual was perched on first when Scott popped a short one to right. Again Regh decided to have his own peculiar plan of action.

He put his head down and ploughed around the paths like a runaway locomotive. Naturally he was very easily doubled up.

GOOD CHANCES KILLED.

Had he been held in a bit, the complexion of the game might have changed. Another thing that looked like weak directing to a rank outsider, was the failure to put a pinch hitter in to swat for Johnson in the sixth frame.

The big pitcher showed conclusively that he was not right in the fifth inning, when the Tigers got no fair to three runs on a combination of passes and hits.

As he was first man up a pinch hitter might have been worth while chancing as the Tigers had a five-run lead.

These and other little things of the kind are how losing games right along for the Carrigans.

To be sure they won five in a row to yesterday, and the best team that ever played the game couldn't do much better, but the fans would like to see them come across with a win when they have their fingers over the rim and not due to pull themselves up a bit.

A win yesterday would have given them a full game gain on the entire field ahead excepting the Mackmen. Washington, Chicago and St. Louis all bit the dust. But baseball yesterdays are filed under Ancient History—so better luck today.

CAN MOVE TO THIRD.

The fight is of course just as hot as ever. The Tigers still lead the Macks two and a half games back, while the Red Sox in fifth place are only four and a half games away from the hand-wagon. They have a chance to move into third place if the Tigers and the Senators and White Sox slip again.

The figures are as follows:

	W.	L.	Behind Leader
Athletics	46	32
Detroit	46	36	2½ games
Washington	43	37	3½ games
Chicago	43	37	4 games
Boston	44	39	4½ games
St. Louis	42	39	5½ games

Final arrangements have been made for a tandem race between the Turville brothers of Revere and the Sollins brothers of Everett to be run in conjunction with the four-cornered one-hour race. This race is the regular list of professional and amateur events at the beach oval to-morrow night.

The motor-paced race will bring out a real treat to the patrons of Henry St. Ives, the crack French marathon runner. His opponents will be Leon Didier, Jimmy Moran and Percy Lawrence.

Didier makes his first appearance at the beach in several weeks tomorrow night. He is expected here today to look over the track for the race. Lawrence will also get here sometime today and will work out on the beach saucer.

RED SOX LOOK GOOD FOR FLAG, SAYS COBB

By FRED HOEY.

"The Red Sox have a handsome chance to win the pennant," declared Ty Cobb of Detroit today. "The new pitchers, Ruth and Shore, were just the men needed to bolster the pitching staff. Of course, nobody can count Detroit out of the race, and the White Sox are a formidable looking aggregation. Taking it from any angle, the race in the league is really between these three teams.

"The Athletics are all done, in my opinion. They have lost their old pepper, and the pitchers are acting badly. The team is a corking bunch when they play to form, but the fact that they have been among the top notchers for so many years has afflicted the players with an indifferent feeling which puts the club in a hole.

WOULD LIKE TO PLAY HERE.

"I have been asked several times about my position in regard to being traded to Boston for Speaker and also my alleged conference with Federal League heads. I want to stay in Detroit if they want me there. Of course I don't know what my president will do. The Detroit fans have used me handsomely.

"If I should happen to be traded I sincerely hope it is to Boston or New York. I would like to wind up my career in Boston. You have the real ball town here. The fans know the game and will applaud a good play. If a Boston player hesitates to strike a slump in hitting the fans don't attack him like they do in most cities. They appreciate that he is in there doing the best he can. This is what makes Boston the king pin ball town in the country. They may get bigger crowds in other cities, but for downright baseball intelligence none men here have them all skinned.

NO IDEA OF JUMPING.

"There has been several stories published about my alleged connections with the Federal League and of the many conferences I am alleged to have had with President Gilmore. As a matter of fact I was in Buffalo to umpire a ball game when, in company with newspaper men, Gilmore happened along. I was introduced and there was the usual gush and stuff and all that and I left. That is as far as my connection with the Federals goes.

"I don't know anything about the Federals except what the papers publish. The league evidently has some coin behind it and there is no denying the fact that the new league has created a spirit of unrest among the players in organized baseball.

"To get back to the American League race, I want to say that the Athletics have their work cut out. Last year at this time they had attained a comfortable lead and were sailing along evenly. See what the standing presents today. They are being crowded hard. I don't figure Washington in the fight for a minute. There are several things lacking in that club and Griffith realizes it. You fans in Boston will see one of the prettiest pennant fights that ever was fought.

CUBS LOOK GOOD.

"The National League race I know little about except what I read. The Chicago Cubs look like a mighty good proposition to me. The situation is that league is almost the same as in ours. But then you have to keep your eye on McGraw. He always has an ace in the hole and is liable to spring a trade that will add tremendous power to his team.

"Believe me, there is no greater rooter for the Braves in this city than yours truly. I regard George Stallings as a remarkable baseball man. I know this man well. I have spent weeks at his Georgia plantation and naturally the conversation drifted to baseball. What Stallings doesn't know about baseball is not worth knowing. I can't at this time figure where the Braves will finish, but you can bet all you have that they will be a few degrees removed from the cellar.

"Tell the fans in Boston that if Detroit doesn't win the pennant I am strong for the Red Sox, and believe me, they have the power to do considerable damage before October sets in."

SURPRISE DAY AT AMATEUR GOLF TOURNEY

By H. P. FARRINGTON.

No golfing critic or fan would have picked more than three of the eight surviving players left to battle for the Massachusetts amateur golf championship at Brae-Burn, had they seen the names and been allowed to make a selection after the qualification round.

Such is golf and its many wiles and ways. Yesterday Brae-Burn was somewhat stunned when seven of their ten candidates for first honors were eliminated from further competition.

That is not the worst of it, however, for the list of losers included such fine players as J. G. Anderson, W. C. Chick, W. E. Shaw, W. H. Cady and F. A. Martin.

Brae-Burn's hopes now rest with R. R. Gorton, G. H. Pushee and R. W. Estabrook, and they are well placed.

It is sad to notice, however, that Pushee, a youngster, is playing against Ouimet today, and that if both the other Brae-Burnites mentioned above win, they will oppose one another in the semi-final match.

Brae-Burn with three players, Woodland with two, Albemarle with two and the Country Club with one, is the way the situation stood at the start of today's play.

Three of the eight players have established themselves in Massachusetts golf, three have never been through two rounds of any large tourney, and two have good golf in them, but never had the time to devote to the practice necessary to make them top-notchers.

How the players started out this morning:

Parker Schofield vs. P. W. Whittemore.

G. H. Pushee vs. Francis Ouimet.

R. R. Lawrence vs. R. R. Gorton.

R. W. Estabrook vs. R. S. Lyon.

Danny Ridge vs. Joe Hyland.

"Kid" Chakas vs. Joe Goodacy.

Patsy Green vs. Howard McRae.

There will be another all-star boxing show at the University A. C. in Cambridge tonight and the "fans" should witness plenty of action, as well matched bouts are scheduled to perform. Danny Ridge of Brooklyn and Joe Hyland, who hails from New York, are booked to clash in the feature event of the evening.

Ridge is a fine boxer and should make things interesting for Hyland, who is a rugged, two-handed fighter. Ridge has already beaten Walter Hohr, the Brooklyn boxer who gave Eddie Murphy two hard battles. Consequently he should carry Hyland along at a merry clip.

The whirl between "Kid" Chakas and Joe Goodacy has aroused considerable interest. Chakas boxed at a recent show at the Atlas Club and made a big hit by his clever work.

The opening encounter will bring together Patsy Green and Edward McRae, two Cambridge rivals. These boys should put up a spirited battle.

BRAVES-REDS IN TIE BATTLE AS STORM BROKE

CINCINNATI, July 17.—The first game of the Boston-Cincinnati series was prevented by a heavy storm.

After 3½ innings were played it grew so dark that the outfielders were unable to see the ball and a few minutes later a fierce storm broke which put the field under water.

When time was called the score stood even, 1 to 1.

Josh Devore, a former Red, played centre for the visitors and Johnny Evers, who was out as the result of a slight spike wound, returned to second. The men in the box were Crutcher and Leon Ames.

Samuel Daniels, first baseman of the Brockton Colonial League Club, has jumped the team. No reason for his "jump" is known. Daniels is a good hitter and one of the fastest men on the team.

AMERICAN EXPERT AT RINGSIDE SAYS SMITH HAD FRENCH RIVAL OUT

GEORGES CARPENTIER, CHAMPION WHITE HEAVYWEIGHT OF WORLD, SKETCHED BY TAD

A FEW MONTHS AGO HE GAVE AWAY A LOT OF WEIGHT AND FOUGHT JOE JEANETTE 20 TOUGH ROUNDS FULL OF TRICK PUNCHES ETC
CARPENTIER STARTED FIGHTING AT 11 AND WON ALL THE FRENCH TITLES IN A FEW YEARS

BUCKLEY SAYS CORRI IN DEAL TO ROB SMITH

LONDON, July 17.—An international controversy involving England, France and the United States is threatened today as a result of the ruling in the Smith-Carpentier battle here last evening when Referee Corri, of England, disqualified Smith, the American champion, and awarded the fight to Carpentier, of France, in the sixth round.

On all sides the American's admirers declare he had his French rival knocked out, and that Corri blundered in fastening the cloak of "foul," while the French sport lovers are loud in their claims that Carpentier was hit while still on the canvas.

A far greater scandal is hinted at by Jim Buckley, manager of Smith, who declared today that he was robbed, that the verdict was the result of a crooked deal and that he has evidence to prove Corri wanted Carpentier to win.

Buckley's statement in full follows:

It is highway robbery. Smith knocked Carpentier out with a right on the point of the jaw. The Frenchman went down and Smith, in making another punch, could not pull himself back and just hit Carpentier's face.

After the first two punches I saw that we were going to get the worst of it. Corri told Smith to keep his hands up although they were up all the time.

He wanted to bother Smith. We have evidence that this was intentional and that he wanted Carpentier to win.

DISGUSTING CLIMAX TO MOST REMARKABLE FIGHT, SAYS LEWSON

By W. ORTON TEWSON.

Special Correspondent of American.

LONDON, July 17.—Georges Carpentier, "white heavyweight champion of the world." This title was handed to him and not won by the son of France last night at the olympia after Gunboat Smith knocked him out in the last minute of the sixth round.

A more disgusting and at the same time a more sensational climax, to what proved probably to be the most remarkable contest in many ways that the prize ring has ever seen, could not be imagined.

The enclosure, almost twice as large as Madison Square Garden, was instantaneously transformed into a scene of indescribable pandemonium. London costers and Paris apaches in $1.25 seats; famous wearers of the Legion of Honor buttons of France, and titled English sportsmen in $25 seats—virtually every individual in the vast place asked for trouble.

And all the Englishmen who favored Gunboat were ready to do battle on their own account with the first sympathizer who dared voice his glee at the "victory."

It is hardly necessary to suggest what the American contingent were doing. "Robber," "Fake," "Boo," "Quitter," were a few of the mildest epithets hurled at Carpentier and Corri, the referee.

Yet Smith undeniably committed a foul, hitting Carpentier a grazing blow on the top of the head after the latter had been knocked to his knees and practically out by a straight right to the jaw.

Even so, under every known rule of boxing, Carpentier, not Smith would have been disqualified as a result of what happened immediately.

Here is exactly what did happen:

Smith found the chance he had been waiting for five and a half rounds when the Frenchman rushed at him with a straight left to the face.

Gunboat shot out a straight right and caught the incoming Carpentier squarely in the pit of the stomach. The latter didn't fall down; simply seemed to shrink into a shapeless mass on the floor. Actually the blow doubled him up as he fell forward onto both knees, but his hands were pressed in his stomach.

Instantly Smith—not realizing that Carpentier was actually out and not even seeing he was off his feet (Carpentier had been using a crouch all the time, his head being almost level with Gunboat's knees) instinctively tried to land a finishing blow, a right overhand swing. It missed the wabbling Frenchman's left ear and grazed the top of his head.

Referee Corri instantly jumped in and motioned Smith away, saying:

"That's all right, Smith, wait."

The AMERICAN correspondent at the ringside was no more than fifteen feet from Corri, and his words were heard distinctly.

But the count was never made. Des Camps scrambled into the ropes almost before Corri had finished telling Smith to wait.

In another second the wildly excited Frenchman was on his knees beside Carpentier vainly trying to lift him and carry him to his corner.

FRENCHMAN UNABLE TO STAND.

Jim Buckley, and the other seconds in Smith's corner shouted protests to Corri at the entrance of Des Camps, which automatically disqualified Carpentier.

The boxing wise-acres at the ringside shrieked and jeered at Smith's seconds and told them not to enter the ring. Smith, in the meantime, was standing with both hands outstretched waiting for the Frenchman to rise and go on with the fight.

But Carpentier was never able to stand on his feet he would never have had a chance.

LONDON, July 17.—I went to the Olympia tonight expecting and hoping that Gunboat Smith would win, but in all my experience as a spectator of boxing contests and as a fighter I have never seen or experienced a more foul exhibition than that given by Gunboat Smith in all the six rounds.

From the outset he did his best to injure Carpentier in every possible way, not alone in the clinches, but in leaving them. His favorite trick was to try to paralyze Carpentier's biceps with a grip of the thumb and balance of his hand, which all boxers know.

In the third round Smith deliberately attempted to twist Carpentier's right arm up behind his back and only stopped when Corri made him do so. It was Carpentier all the way after the first round.

Harry Pollock and Dan McKetrick both held watches on the rounds, and both told me that Smith was down for count of thirteen at the end of the fourth round when the bell came to his assistance. It is certain that Smith got the best of every decision prior to the final one. There is no question that Smith deliberately fouled Carpentier.

ENGLISH NEWSPAPERS DECLARE SMITH BLOW NOT INTENTIONAL FOUL

LONDON, July 17.—A majority of the papers today agree that Smith's foul was wholly unintentional. Several of them say that Referee Corri for some time was of a mind to continue the fight.

The Daily Telegraph says:

"Des Camps, by breaking into the ring, violated the rules, and the verdict must have gone to Corri if Corri had not decided that the American had already forfeited the fight."

The Daily Mail says that the entirely unintentional blow has left not the slightest stain on Smith's honor as a boxer.

The Daily Chronicle says:

"Never was a foul blow less intentional or more surprising to the man who received it."

Observations to the same effect are made in virtually all the morning papers, and although it is generally agreed that the fight appeared to be Carpentier's, much sympathy is expressed for Smith and regret at the unfortunate ending.

Lord Lonsdale, after the fight, expressed the opinion that the blow which resulted in Smith's disqualification was due to the fact that Carpentier fights low.

SMITH'S OWN STORY OF LAST BLOW IN FIGHT

the momentum of his own blow had carried him to his knees when his fist missed the mark. It was not the miss which sent Carpentier to the mat, but my right to the jaw.

Carpentier had been fighting with a low crouch and when I swung back and faced him I did not realize for an instant whether he was upon his knees or crouching. I brought an overhand swing into action, but before the blow landed I realized that the Frenchman was down and that he was in distress. I tried to shift the blow so that it would miss, but did not fully succeed. It struck a glance upon the side of the head.

If it were not for Des Camps, Carpentier's second, things might have gone all right. But he jumped into the ring with his arms going like a couple of windmills and yelling in French as though someone had murdered his whole family. Corri naturally got excited.

"I want to fight Carpentier again, for I know I'm his master."

WELSH CALLS IT A FOUL.

Freddy Welsh declares, on the contrary, that Smith not only fouled deliberately in the sixth round when the contest came to an end, but had gone on several times previously.

A number of authoritative English sporting writers, who occupied ringside seats, made the definite statement today that Carpentier should not have been given the decision and that the real test between the two men must come in another battle.

Carpentier contends that he won the fight squarely. The Frenchman proved a foxy ring general. He had caused it to be reported that he would fight an aggressive battle, whereas he allowed Smith to carry the fight to him all the time.

Smith received $10,000 as the loser's end, while Carpentier got twice that sum.

Americans lost a fortune in wagers, as they had plunged heavily in backing the "Gunboat."

About 16,000 persons saw the contest, the receipts being in the neighborhood of $85,000.

"Was Hit Hard When Down and Down Only"

By GEORGE CARPENTIER.

Special Cable to N. Y. American.

LONDON, July 16.—I want nobody to make any mistake about that blow of Gunboat's which disqualified him. I was hit hard when down, and only when down. I had put all my strength into a right hook, which was intended for Smith's jaw, and missed badly. The miss made me over-balance, and being in danger of losing my footing I dropped on one knee. It was then that Gunboat landed the blow on the back of my head. It was a terrific blow. Gunboat is too clumsy, too slow, and I can always beat him as long as he remains so, although he is an uncommonly powerful hitter. I thought I would have won the fight with a knockout in the fourth round. After that round I was sure for a moment doubted my ability to win. Still I'll be pleased to meet Gunboat again, or any one else in the world, including Johnson.

Did Not Touch Him, Declares Smith in Talk of 'Foul'

By GUNBOAT SMITH.

LONDON, July 17.—Gunboat Smith, interviewed today, claimed he was a winner. He said:

"I had the fight well in hand from the first. Carpentier did not strike me as being the fast, clever, hard-hitting fighter I had been informed he was. He gave me one or two very decent jabs with his right, but they looked power. I hardly felt them.

"It was a decent one he put on me when I went down for a moment, but I knew exactly what I was doing. I took the counts one by one. I heard them quite clearly and got up at the proper moment, knowing I had but a few seconds to go to complete the round.

"I managed to get a good full right to his jaw, swinging well from the body. It landed on the right spot and turned me almost completely around. I described the circle owing to the force of my blow and naturally as I came face to face with him, I made a rush for him.

"That was instinctive. But before I could get my blow home I saw his position and withheld it. The force of my swing nearly threw me over his body.

"I didn't touch him and didn't intend to touch him. Nobody in my position would dream of hitting a man where Carpentier was, but that doesn't alter the fact that my right swing put Carpentier out and I say the decision should have been in my favor.

"I am ready to fight him again tonight, tomorrow night, next week, next month, and however he likes, and I am certain I should win."

$60,000 at Stake on Result of Golf Twosome Today

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 17.—H. K. Fulton of New York city opposes Walter F. Foster of Seattle in a twosome today over the links of the Atlantic City Country Club at Northfield, and it is estimated that $60,000 hangs on the result.

The Easterners have raised amounts easily totaling $30,000 to support their favorite over the Westerner, whose followers are gobbling up these sums in startling fashion. Donald Ross of New York city alone placed $10,000 on the fray.

Rivalry between the contingents at the National Bill Posters' Association brought about the match.

PITTSBURGH, July 17.—It was rumored here today that Jeff Tesreau, one of the Giants' pitchers, and Red Murray, an outfielder of the same team, have signed with the Pittsburgh Federals.

There's a chap on Bill's street who's mighty lazy.

He hates to take care of his lawn, but his is the greenest and trimmest in three blocks.

Hampden Ale

is the reason.

Every time his wife wants some lawn work done she lets him have a bottle of Hampden to put strength, pep and ambition into him.

Then she hides the case and won't let him have any more till the job is done.

He thinks about the goodness of the ale—how mild it is—and what a thirst quencher; the harder he thinks the harder he works and hustles through in double quick time.

Mrs. Bill asked Bill what he thought of this plan.

Bill grinned. "Hide my case of Hampden," he said, "and you'll find yourself a grass widow."

Do you want to know why Bill and his friends are so fond of Hampden Ale? Phone your dealer for a case today and find out.

CHAPTER II.

HOMEWOOD is one of New York's most beautiful suburbs. It calls itself a suburb of the metropolis, although it lies on the New Jersey side of the Hudson River.

The New Yorker motoring through Homewood finds himself wondering why he is ever willing to remain in the noisy city, and the rider in the trolley car that runs near the residential district sighs with longing for enough money to live as the denizens of Homewood live. Here one finds large and handsome houses, green lawns, great shade trees and all the comforts of the city combined with the beauties of the country.

In one of these commodious houses lived John Hale, his wife and daughter and his wife's niece, Constance Medford. A few blocks away was the residence of Mrs. James Morton and her one son, Ralph. Tom Morton, Ralph's cousin, had an apartment in New York, but was a frequent visitor in his aunt's home.

It was on one of these many visits to Homewood during his boyhood that he had met and fallen in love with Edith Hale. She had been a mere slip of a girl at that time, while he was quite young to think of marriage. But he had waited through the years that she had spent with her mother in Europe "finishing" the education that had been begun in a New England boarding school.

The four years in Europe had been to him of the college education that most girls receive. John Hale did not like women's colleges, yet he wanted his only daughter to have all the advantages his wealth could procure for her. This thought had reconciled him to four Winters without his wife and child. Winters which he spent in a hotel in the city. Each Summer he "ran across" to Europe for three months of vacation from business and of travel with his family.

KEPT HIM WAITING

Edith Hale had been back at home but six months when Thomas Morton asked her to marry him. She kept him waiting for three months before she gave him a definite answer. He was sure that his fate depended upon with her, for blunt John Hale had granted him permission to seek Edith's hand when Tom, with old-fashioned ideas of what was right and proper, asked for the privilege of his love for her. At the end of their confidential talk together John Hale had a hearty "Go to it" for a shoulder.

"My boy," he said, his eyes suddenly moist, "I have always dreaded parting from Edith, but if she must marry, and I suppose girls will do it—with a sigh—as if a laugh—I would rather that it should be to you than to anyone else."

"You honor me very highly, sir," Tom said, deeply moved. "I wish I were more worthy of the trust you have in me."

"I do honor you," the elderly man said, "for no higher honor could be shown any man than to trust him with the happiness of such a girl as Edith—my only girl, too, remember. But I'm glad it's you, Tom, and I don't say it because you had a little money left to you by your father, nor because you are making a comfortable living from your business, but because you are a gentleman by birth and at heart.

"I used to be afraid that Edith could take a fancy to one of those boys known each other since they were children, you know, although in absence of Edith and her absence in Europe kept them apart a great deal. Yet I rather suspected she had was in love with her, but I discouraged him by my manner as much as possible. I would never approve of that match.

"Oh, I know"—as Tom uttered a protest—"that Ralph and Edith are cousins, and that you are fond of him, and all that, but, Tom, he lacks stability. He has no definite business, though he plays at the law a little, but he is too willing to have his mother support him. And I don't like his principles, my boy, nor his views of life."

A DISAPPOINTMENT

This conversation had taken place some weeks before Tom Morton started for Baltimore to pay Ralph's debt to Mrs. Price. He recalled it as he telephoned to the Hale home after Ralph had left him.

Tom Morton and Edith Hale had been engaged now for a fortnight. It was Constance Medford who answered the telephone. She would call Edith at once, she said. But he checked her to ask a question first.

"Constance," he said, "Edith is well and happy, isn't she?"

"Why of course she is!" Constance replied. "Why shouldn't she be?"

The man laughed nervously. "Oh, I don't know, only I have just had a disappointment and it has upset me a little perhaps. I find myself called out of town on business. I will tell Edith myself, but I just thought I would mention it to you now, for if she is depressed or disappointed you will cheer her, I know."

"Of course, I will try it," the girl agreed reassuringly. "Now wait while I call Edith."

A minute later the listener at the New York end of the wire heard the voice of the girl he loved.

"Yes," said the voice, "you want to speak to me, Tom? Aren't you coming out to dinner?"

"I can't, Edith," he replied guardedly, mindful of chance listeners on the wire. "Business takes me out of town tonight."

"Oh!" There was a note of mingled surprise and regret in the sweet voice. "Can't you put it off? Surely what you and I were going to talk about is more important than any old business, isn't it?"

"To us—yes indeed it is," the man said with a tender laugh, "but I simply have to go away, Edith. I'll be back in plenty of time for the dinner tomorrow night, dear."

"But can't you put off the business that's taking you away this evening?" she repeated.

"I can't dear," he regretted. "I'm fearfully sorry."

"So am I!" she returned briefly "Goodbye!"

Was she vexed? the man asked himself as he hung up the receiver. He would write her a line before he started for Baltimore, and tomorrow evening they would be together at the dinner at which their engagement was to be announced. And at this thought, his doubts vanished and the cloud passed from his face.

(To Be Continued.)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YES AND NO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of eighteen. About a month ago I met a young man two and three years my senior, who is considered good-looking, the kind that every girl likes. The third time I met him he asked me to keep steady company with me, and the same day he asked me for a kiss, which I thought was very improper, as I had known him such a short time, and refused him, which made him slightly angry. Do you think I was right in refusing his kiss? Should I keep steady company with him?

Q. K.

YOU were right in refusing to kiss him, and perhaps a refusal to keep steady company with him till you know him better would be fatal to the man. His good looks have made him too self-assured.

OBEY YOUR PARENTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and in love with a man seven years older than myself. He has asked my parents if he could marry me in June and my parents object to it, thinking I am too young to marry. So he has asked me to elope with him. Can you advise me what I should do, as I dearly love him and could not live without him. HIS LOVED ONE

HE doesn't love you or he did, he would not make such a request. See no more of him, and some day you will be thankful you escaped the fate of being his wife.

DEPENDS ON THE MAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Which is better: To marry a doctor or a common laboring man? I had an argument with somebody. He said if I would marry a doctor I would not live happy. I am twenty-two years of age. ANXIOUS.

IT depends on the man for assurance of happiness; don't look to the occupation. So long as that is honorable it cuts very little figure in a wife's happiness or sorrow.

THE ENGAGEMENT IS NO BAR

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for a young man engaged to be married to escort another lady home? Or is it proper for him to see her to the car only? PEARL M.

A MAN should be a gentleman at all times, and particularly observant of all the little courtesies when he is on trial as a lover.

He should take her home if the distance permits; otherwise, only to the car.

Summertime Fables

By DOROTHY DIX

ONCE upon a time there was a Man who had the Misfortune to be married to a Noble and Conscientious Woman who believed that a Husband and Wife should be One, with but a single Thought. It was her Boast that she and John had Never Been Separated for a Day since they Tied Up Together.

The Man endured this with Great Patience for many Years, but at last Too Much Maria got upon his Nerves, and he began to make a Rough House at Home, and Hand his Wife a Line of Back Talk that he would not have dreamed of passing to any Lady with an Up Behind Sight.

"See," he said to himself, "but a Man is a Candidate for the Bughouse when he slips his Neck in the Matrimonial Halter, and I cannot attend to business for wondering what made me Tie Up with that Bunch of Calico I did. If they did not Read all of your Love Letters in Court it would be Me for a cunning little Divorce, for I would Rather Pay Alimony than to have to Lamp the same Face every Morning at Breakfast."

Nor was the Wife enjoying the Perpetual Tete-a-Tete any more than her Husband.

"It seems to me," she said to her Own Soul, "that a Thriller Matrimony is Considerable of a False Alarm. Perhaps I Missed my Real Affinity, or perhaps All Husbands are to the Weary when you get them Home. At any rate, this Domestic Stunt has got me going, and if I have to listen to John pull off another of his Ancient Wittycisms, or tell How he would Settle the Mexican Difficulty if he were President, I shall scream and throw the Coffee Pot at his Head. Oh, dear, I wonder What is the Price of a First Class Ticket to Reno?"

Being a perfect Lady and Gentleman, the Husband and Wife carefully Dissembled their Real Sentiments toward each other, and Merely Revealed their Feelings by Daily Spats which they fought without Gloves. Finally, however, they could endure their Misery no longer, and they each went secretly to the Same Lawyer to Consult Him as to the Most Expeditious Way of Getting a Divorce.

"My Wife," said the Man, "is an Ornament to her Sex, but it is a Be for a Suicide Grave if I have to live with her Another Day."

"My Husband is a Model of all the Virtues," said the Woman, "and the only Objection I have to Him is that I cannot bear Him in the Same Room."

"The Trouble with both of you," said the Astute Lawyer, "is that you are Suffering from an Overdose of Matrimony. All that you need is to take a Summer Vacation as Far from Each Other as you can get —Break away."

Thereupon the Wife Hiked out for Europe, and the Husband went West, and, as the lawyer had Predicted, when the Autumn came they found themselves Once More in Love and Pining for Each Other's Society.

Moral: This Fable Teaches that A Short Vacation saves a Long Divorce.

Presence of Mind

They had been mutually attracted to each other at the Sunday matinee at the rink. Stealthy meetings at tea-shops and moving picture theatres had established them in that stage called "love." The wedding day had been fixed, and the Bank of France chosen for the scene of the honeymoon.

"But, Gerge," she said one day, "had you not better call and tell mamma all about it? She ought to know, you know."

"Yes; I suppose she ought," admitted George, somewhat nervously.

Now, mamma was a chilling and haughty widow, and George felt somewhat nervous as he waited in the drawing room for her to appear.

"I understand," she said, sailing into the room, "that you have been making love to my daughter in secret. In these circumstances, therefore, I feel it to be my duty to forbid you ever to see her or to enter this house again! Good morning."

"Madam," said George, pulling himself together, "it is true I see you now for the first time. Had I seen you before meeting your daughter, I should never have thought of her for a moment—I should have loved you to distraction!"

"Ah, well!" said mamma, unbending. "What I objected to was the secrecy of it all. Come into the next room and kiss your bride."

An American Triumph in Paris

Here's the "Fado"—Newest Dance

It's the Revival of the Tango and the Latest French Fandango

These photographs show Miss Margaret Hawkesworth, of New York, and Basil Durant doing the celebrated "Fado" with which they recently took the French capital by storm.

The Folly of Getting Even

A GIRL wrote me recently of a man who had transferred his affections from her to another girl, that girl even. Both she and I were about that. I'll sacrifice anything to be revenged on both of them."

I suggested that perhaps she ought to be grateful to the girl who had saved her from a fickle man who might have married her and then deserted her. It also seemed possible that the man was a weak creature who ought to be pitied for the unstable affections that would surely hurt his life now and then and other persons.

"That may all be true, but they've belittled me, and I'll get even. I'll hurt them both just the way they have hurt me."

And the girl is going on stubbornly to hurt no less a person than—herself.

For no one can plan and plot revenge and meanness and cruelty without having it react most strongly upon herself. Truly we ourselves are the very ones to fall into the pits we dig for others.

ONLY HARM TO YOURSELF

When you plan to pay some one back in their own coin for hurting you, exactly what happens? You make your nature just so much hard and cruel and selfish than it was when you failed to hold their affection. You make it just so much less likely that you will be sufficiently likable to win another and more lasting affection than the one that hurt you or strayed from you.

Every feeling you have and every deed you do works back to you. We get from life and people exactly what we give to them. Give love and kindness and they will return to you. This is not sentiment. It is stern LAW. How!

If you rise above unkindness and conquer hatred you become at once sweet and strong. If you are fine and splendid your face will show it in attractive expression that comes from your lovable soul. Affection and admiration will come to you as to a magnet.

A HARM TO YOUR CHARACTER

Meeting hatred with hatred, giving revenge for mistreatment degrades and weakens you. It hurts your own character and mars your own face.

When you try to "get even" with some one who has mistreated you do you know exactly what you are accomplish?

You let them see just how they have been able to wound you and so expose yourself to either sneers or pity. You lower your own character so it will not attract the best from others. You encourage bitterness to grow in your nature.

Revenge is a boomerang. It will return and strike you. Mind it.

Meet hatred with love and you will become so lovable that hatred will not often dare come your way.

Household Suggestions

When using oil stoves, to prevent them from smoking, dissolve one tablespoonful of common salt in every pint of paraffin oil that you use. This also gives a much clearer light, and it prevents the oil vessel from rusting.

To clean decanters, mix half a gill of vinegar with a handful of fine sand, put a little in each decanter and shake well. Rinse in clear water.

Habitual numbness of the hands may be removed by rubbing them for a short time in cold water, followed with dry friction.

When rinsing children's clothes, add a little alum to the water, as this renders them less liable to catch fire.

To test the purity of coffee, pour cold water on it. If the water assumes a brownish hue, it may be concluded that there is chicory with it.

To remove a rusty screw, first apply a very hot iron to the head for a short time, then immediately use the screw-driver.

The most difficult of all stains to take out are those made by coffee. With care, however, the stain can be removed from the most delicate silk or woollen fabrics. Rub the mark gently with a little pure glycerine, then rinse it in lukewarm water, lay a cloth over the damp part on the wrong side, and press with a cool iron until dry. Do not wet more of the material than is absolutely necessary.

If silver is to be stored away for some time pack it with dry flour. It will remain untarnished.

When making coffee sprinkle a little salt on the coffee before pouring on boiling water, and the flavor will be wonderfully improved.

To keep cheese for some time, and prevent it becoming moldy or dry, wrap it up in a cloth damped with vinegar and keep it in a dish.

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water and lay it on the injured part.

THEIR MARRIED LIFE

Helen's New Suit Does Not Please Warren After All

IT was quite late when Helen and Warren finally left the Gilmore and proceeded leisurely toward the car. Just before they reached it it began to rain, and Warren hurried Helen along with a motherly expression about her foolishness in wearing that suit. Helen could not help exclaiming at the injustice of this.

"Why, dear, how could I tell it wouldn't? It was perfectly wonderful out this afternoon"

Hurrying had made Warren warm and he answered gruffly:

"Didn't suppose you'd want to dress up so all dred much just to go down to see Louise. Couldn't see that she looked so nice herself."

"Why, dear, that was a stunning gown she had on. It must have cost a great deal. If I hadn't worn this suit I should have worn a dress that wouldn't be half as appropriate for a rainy night. I don't think the rain will hurt this suit at all," and Helen brushed a few drops from the coat.

Helen had had such a happy time all day that Warren's remarks hurt more than they would have under any other circumstances. Bob's tenderness and consideration of Louise home I liked it so much better than the gray."

"Well, how could I tell that it would look this way or you'd Marsha it's the hat that gives you that appearance."

WARREN IS UNFAIR

"What appearance, dear? You have always liked this hat so much. Isn't it becoming? Don't you remember that day I had it sent up you told me it was the most becoming hat I had ever bought?"

"Maybe it's the hat and suit together, but you have that appearance that most of the women on the street have, of wanting to attract every man you meet."

Helen knew this was unfair. To tell the truth she was rather delighted with her new clothes. She had always been a quiet type, with little or no dash to attract attention, and now that she was so obviously attractive to other people besides her husband it inwardly pleased her.

"Now, dear, you know that I haven't done anything but talk to you ever since I entered. What could I have possibly done to make anyone look at me?"

"It's the way you women put on your clothes these days. A suit like that a couple of years ago would have been all right, but now with a hat that goes off on one ear, no wonder men don't know what to do with their eyes."

"But Warren, I'll have to wear the suit now that I've bought it. I thought you liked it so much. It's really too late to change it now, you are being unfair in all afternoon."

"Who's talking about changing it? If you change it, you'd end up with something worse. Come on, here we are."

Helen followed Warren out of the car, and in the rush of the after-the-show crowd dropped her handbag. Warren was striding on ahead, and didn't notice it, but one of the men who had been sitting opposite in the car handed it to her with a bow. She flushed as she thanked him and Warren, looking around suddenly, caught the smile and the bow. The man was gone, however, before he could reach them.

"I dropped my bag, dear," she said, apologetically. "Some one pushed against me in the crowd!"

HE EMBARRASSES HER

"I noticed that you seemed rather pleased about it," he said sarcastically. "Attracting so much attention seems to have gone to your head."

Several people looked around at his tone, and again Helen flushed angrily.

"Why did he always have to embarrass her needlessly before people? At least he might have waited until they reached home. Warren made his way with long strides through the streets, Helen hurrying along by his side.

Helen was thankful that he did not speak as they went up in the elevator, and as he unlocked the door of the apartment she went in quietly. The place was warm and cozy after the wet streets, and Fussy Purrmew rubbed her soft head confidingly against Warren as he closed the door after him. Helen turned on the lights over the dresser and began taking off her hat as Warren looked in the door.

"Feel like having anything to eat?" he questioned, as she slipped out of her coat. "I'll open a couple of bottles of beer!"

"There's some sardine paste in the ice box. I'll make some sandwiches; get it out, will you, dear? I'll be out in a minute," said Helen, delighted at the turn things had taken. With a warm little glow in her heart she slipped off her coat and blouse and put on a loose house gown.

"How the devil do you open this can?" said Warren, as she entered the kitchen. "Never mind, I've got it; here it is. All ready for the bread? I'll carry the beer into the dining room. Hurry up! it's a good while since we've had anything to eat."

"Here, drink some beer," he said, filling a glass; "it'll put you to sleep in a jiffy. How do you feel now, better?"

"But, dear, don't you really like that suit and hat? I thought you'd be pleased with everything."

"Oh, the suit's all right, so is the hat, it's the dress, I think. You don't know what the world is coming to with the styles you women are getting up with. Unless you're putting your clothes on these days."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I WISH this life was a lot longer, George," said the Manicure Lady. "If we could stick around here four or five hundred years we might learn about all there is to know about it. It's a shame to get the right dope on the universe, even by going to a university."

"Yes, but if you could live five hundred years you wouldn't begin to know everything even then," said the Head Barber, "and at the end of the five hundred years you would want to live to be a hundred years."

"You must think I am a awful bonehead not to learn about everything in five hundred years," declared the Manicure Lady. "I ain't the wisest fish that ever swam, but a little goodness knows that even at my tender age I have got Jerry to a few things, and if a few could teach me more than most of my customers seem to know, I expect to do pretty good in five centuries.

"I was telling Wilfred that I would like to live a hundred years and if I core I died, and he said I was balmy in the bean. He reminded me that most women begin to feel tired by the time they are fifty or sixty, and I must admit that would make me think how wrinkled a girl would be at the ripe old age of five hundred. But I wouldn't mind the wrinkles so much if it could know a lot of things that have puzzled me.

"People don't get no happiness out of knowing a lot of things," said the Head Barber, "I was happier when I was a kid than I am now, and I didn't know anything to make me sad."

"I don't seem to me that you know enough now to make your heart ache by the looking pictures," answered the Manicure Lady. "You ain't the kind of a gent, George, that goes much for knowing a lot more knowledge. If you have a good line on the pool and billiard games you don't bother you don't bother thinking no more any one day, but it's different with a thinker like me. I sees so many things going on in this world that don't seem right to my way of reasoning, and that is why I would like to live long enough to learn the reason why they go on the way they don't.

"Folks ought to mind their own business more," said the Head Barber.

"Thank you for the dig" snapped the Manicure Lady. "It came from you, though, and people that wants to progress in this world ought not mind the sneers of simple-minded people that never progress at all. I have read about Helen Keller Gaffney and that the world moved folks like you was there to tell him to mind his own business.

"And when Columbus discovered the Pacific Ocean and the Mississippi River I suppose a lot of mutts asked him why he didn't mind his business and let leave them alone. I guess after this when I want to talk about any of them things, logical, scientific things I will talk to some customer with brains, and not to you."

"A customer with brains usually comes in just to get shaved, though," said the Head Barber, "or to get a hair cut. There is some exceptions but you might believe a lot about things with me than with most of the Jos that gets their nails did in here."

"Yes, George, I suppose you are right," sighed the Manicure Lady. "I guess I'll have to get my entertainment for a thoughtful girl like me."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

"I don't want to appear boastful," said the artist, "but the beauty of my pictures renders people absolutely speechless."

"Hooray!" exclaimed the weary-looking woman, "I must bring my wife to see them."

A Message to Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women, everywhere, are hereby told to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty and handle nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making foods you eat, and, instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of purifying and enriching the blood, actions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the fat-making foods and put them over to the blood, where they belong. Then the blood, being rich and run-down tissues and build them up. This is why you see, that, like a dry farm—eager and hungry—it gets fatty materials of which it is being deprived. This is the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food you eat. To help overcome this sinful waste of flesh-building materials, and thus stop the leakage of wts is to use Sargol, the greatest of all assimilative tonics—a force that is recommended so highly by so many doctors and druggists.

Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and you will quickly note your cheeks fill out and color of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, making the angles and projecting point. Your digestive organs are toned up and get from his wholesaler, and will readily put on the pounds of real, solid fat where it is needed to round out neck, arms, bust and form, and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to put on a few pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder.

LIGHTING CONTRACT DOOMED TO DEFEAT WITH FACTS KNOWN

Overwhelming defeat of Mayor Curley's proposed $5,500,000 street electric lighting contract is predicted on all sides today, as a result of the publicity given to its objectionable features by the AMERICAN and by the trade union delegation which appeared before the City Council executive committee.

That the Edison Electric Illuminating Company either will be compelled to give the city better terms in a new contract or face a rigid investigation by the Gas & Electric Commission now seems assured.

Facts brought out at the Council committee hearing given the union men indicate that a $1,000,000 saving can be effected under the kind of contract which present-day conditions warrant the city asking for.

This hearing was attended by representatives of the Steam and Electrical Workers' Council, as well as the three leading officers of the Boston Central Labor Union, which have almost 100,000 members in this city alone.

"UNFAIR TO CITY."

The union men were represented by Attorney John P. Feeney and Joseph B. Eastman, secretary of the Public Franchise League, Thomas W. Byrnes, their electrical expert, and Herman N. Commerford, business agent of the Stationary Engineers' Union, their principal witness. William Kobe, president, Henry Abrahams, secretary, and John J. Fenton, executive board member, of the Central Labor Union, also attended, while the gallery was filled with interested union men.

"I should ask Governor Walsh to call a special session of the General Court to investigate the matter. They would find a way to settle it," was the answer made by Henry Abrahams when asked by Councilor Coulthurst what steps he would take to improve the position in the matter in which the city found itself.

"The company seems to have the city by the throat," said Mr. Abrahams. "The city should not sign the contract.

"This meeting has done more to create feeling for public ownership of public utilities than organized labor or anything else has done."

Attorney Feeney characterized as unfair to the city in every particular the so-called arbitration clause of the proposed contract. If adopted, he said, it would take away from the city the right to determine what should be done to enforce properly its provisions. Also that it was unsafe for the city to allow arbitration without knowing just who the arbitors would be.

An arbitration clause that would permit the city to select one man, the company another, and these two men the third member of that board, he asserted, is the better way to proceed. He further insisted that the contract ought to provide for non-discrimination against union men, as well as giving citizens the preference of employment.

Expert Byrnes stated emphatically that almost $1,000,000 saving could be secured for the city over the prices cited in the proposed contract in ten years' time by substituting new type 310 watt arc lamps for the old style 520 watt lamps now used in this city.

A fair price for these lamps, he said, would be $65.25 a year, as against the $87.50 asked for in the new contract and the $103.54 actually being paid by the city today. And this notwithstanding the fact that these new type lamps will give an even more powerful light on a 44 and 4-10 per cent. less current than is used now.

SULLIVAN KEEPS QUIET.

This startling statement was gone into at great length by Councilmen Collins, Coulthurst, Kenny, Coleman, Woods and Watson. Councilmen Attridge, as chairman of the committee, and McDonald, president of the Council, did not take part in this cross-examination, but it was evident from their general demeanor it made a vivid impression upon them. Councilman Ballantyne was not present.

In marked contrast to his actions at the former committee meeting, when the $5,500,000 lighting contract was up for discussion, Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan was unusually quiet. Where at that time he appeared to be lobbying for the contract and the company, he refrained from any open wire-pulling at this hearing.

Here are a few of the most striking facts brought out at the hearing, and advanced by Councilmen opposed to the measure, showing why this proposed lighting contract should not be ratified:

The gross sum that must be paid by the city cannot be reduced under this contract, even if under the proposed arbitration clause the cost of producing light is reduced 100 per cent.

It makes no difference whether or not the city is granted a cost-per-lamp reduction from the $87.50 now stipulated. If the total number of lamps used at the time does not run the cost per year up to the initial contract cost, the city will be compelled to pay the same total in any event.

Entitled to a two-thirds portion of any cost-of-production saving effected by the company in the future, nominally, this really means that the city cannot save so much as a dollar on its electric lighting bills under the new contract for ten years under any combination of circumstances.

The city might add to the number of its lights, in order to get its money's worth, but the gross payments to be made to the Edison Company for the ten years would remain the same no matter what the cost to the company is producing light.

MORE BAD FEATURES.

No arbitration of the real cost of production is possible under the terms of the new contract. The relative cost in the future, as compared with the cost today, is provided for. But this again is made worthless by forbidding inquiry into the cost of production previous to the contract being signed.

Under this process of shrewd elimination the company can block any attempt to learn the true cost of light production. The difference between today's cost and that of some years hence is the limit. And no one outside the company's officials today knows what the real cost of light production now is.

Louis K. Rourke, Commissioner of Public Works, has declared that all the city can do today is to make a near-guess at this cost. Some experts assert that it is low enough to permit of the price per light being made $80 or less. The company refuses to do more than set an arbitrary figure, on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

If the contract is ratified by the City Council, the company's say so is better than the opinion of either the experts or Mr. Rourke's near guess.

The city itself, any arbitration board, the courts, all will be made helpless in the matter. It will be impossible to go behind present-day estimates, as made solely by the company's officials.

Still another objectionable feature is found in the permissive arbitration, under which the city is supposed to get two-thirds of any saving to the company in the cost of light production. It should be made compulsory, the objectors say, to be at all effective.

The ten-year tenure of the contract also is a strongly objectionable feature. No absolute provision is made for the ending of it even at the expiration of ten years.

Final action on the contract cannot come before the next meeting of the City Council, which is scheduled for Monday, August 1?. In view of the tremendous opposition now known to its ratification, its defeat in open council meeting ought to follow.

Once this defeat obtains, the next step would be to end the existing contract, advertise for new bids, and compel the Edison Company to give the city better terms than it now offers by an appeal to the Gas and Electric Commission under the State law.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York by afternoon, gains including Canadian Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ¼, Missouri Pacific ¼, Steel ⅛, Amalgamated ⅛, American Smelting ⅝, and Union Pacific ⅝. Among declines were Chesapeake & Ohio ¼, New York Central ¼, Lehigh Valley ½, New Haven ¾, American Can ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio 1⅝, Pennsylvania 1⅛, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 2, common 2, preferred 3. Reading, American Telephone and Northern Pacific were unchanged.

In Boston advances included New Haven ⅝, Greene-Cananea ½, United Fruit ¾, Granby 1 and Butte & Superior ⅝. American Telephone was off ¼ and Shoe ¼.

STOCKS STEADY AT START.

Trading did not have the scope this morning that it had in the forenoon yesterday, but markets had a good tone at the opening and within a few minutes most of the leaders were showing gains. They were small, however. In New York interest centred upon Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio and New Haven. Baltimore & Ohio sagged a point to a new low, but later partially recovered. Union Pacific made a fractional gain.

But New Haven still held the centre of the speculative stage and opening at a decline was traded in on a large scale amid considerable excitement. One dispatch said: "While sales of New Haven were being made in one part of the room at 52, the stock was changing hands in another quarter at 51¾. Although the supply was heavy, the demand was equal to it. Within a few minutes the price had risen to 53⅛."

BUSINESS WAS PROFESSIONAL.

It was said that there was no liquidation of consequence this morning and that business was entirely professional. The recent decline has improved the technical condition of the market and it is believed that at present a number of weak stocks which have been the object of bear drives are oversold. Bears were not so aggressive this morning. By some traders a decision as to Eastern freight rates is expected tomorrow afternoon, or by Monday at the latest. But the majority of them are in a state of great doubt as to that.

The future of the New Haven road was a topic of general discussion. Many were of the opinion that a receivership and a reorganization would be the best course for rehabilitating the great property. From Washington came the statement—"Both criminal prosecution of New England directors and a dissolution suit against the railroad are now probable, it is said at the Department of Justice. Before making official announcement, Attorney-General McReynolds will consult the President."

NEW YORK CENTRAL RUMORS.

New York Central was closely watched and rose during the morning above yesterday's closing price. Most of the time, however, it showed a fractional loss. Rumors that the road is to be investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission are persistently circulated by bears. Its decline is largely a sympathetic movement induced by New Haven weakness. Rock Island common sold above a point, but the preferred issue was no stronger. Chesapeake & Ohio at 45¼ was at the lowest price it has touched in years. Among standard rails Pennsylvania was prominent as a recessional. Its loss at one time was 1½. "Katy" preferred sold as low as 29¼. The New York market was still steady in the second hour, but quieter and more inclined to waver.

Americans ruled lower in London, with St. Paul especially weak. It was said that they were being sold in that market upon New York orders.

By midday lists were irregular, with the majority of issues showing losses. Trading was very quiet and narrow in Boston.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

London copper warrants were firm this morning, and by noon spot and futures were up 2s. 6d each.

Bankers interested in the extended $25,000,000 collateral trust notes of Missouri Pacific, maturing June 1, 1915, have formed a protective committee composed of E. G. Merrill, president Union Trust Company, chairman; Stephen Baker, Howard Bayne, L. V. Bright, A. B. Hepburn and Henry Ruhlender.

Avenues to Fortune Are Many of These Ads

There's a column in the American's classified section entitled "Business Opportunities."

If you've capital to invest and want to get in business for yourself, this column will make mighty interesting reading for you.

In it you'll find the announcements of men who have found the field for a promising business and yet haven't the required capital to make the proposition a go.

You'll find offers from men with established enterprises who want to take in partners; and you'll find flourishing businesses for sale.

It's a column filled with opportunities for the man who wants to invest either his time or his money, or both.

If, however, you seek some special field of investment, simply state the proposition you are looking for in a Want Ad of your own. Then leave it with any of the American's Want Ad Stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, Main office at 80 Summer street, or telephone Main 5180, the

Boston's Want Ad Directory

"FULL VALUE," NEW SLOGAN IN BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES.

"What is there in it for—the other party?"

That is the new version.

* * *

Far-sighted, broad-gauge people have discarded the old formula: "What is there in it for me?"

* * *

Human nature has not been suddenly regenerated. Unselfishness has not routed selfishness.

The new version is being adopted because it pays.

The most successful business enterprise today is the one that strives first, last and all the time to give its customers full value for their money, to give satisfaction, to please patrons. To succeed permanently, a firm or corporation must ask itself squarely: "What is there in it for those who deal with us?" If the concern knows that it is cheating, that its existence depends upon perpetual deceit, then it is conscious that sooner or later it will reap what it sows.

* * *

Many employes constantly growl about their lot. They ask themselves: "What is there in it for me?" And, truly enough, oftentimes there is very little—shamefully little.

* * *

But let the dissatisfied employe, by way of change, ask what there is in his services for the employer, and let him concentrate upon putting all he can into it for the filler of his pay envelope.

The outcome will be all right, even though justice may creep along with leaden feet.

This daily "What-is-there-in-it-for-me?" carping keeps many a man down who would rise were he to adopt the more modern and more enlightened motto. The fellow, be he office boy or proprietor, whose sole concern is to pull in as much as possible, will not go far and stay there.

* * *

It is decreed among the eternal verities that it is better to give than receive, and the largest successes, no matter in what field, can be attained only by fulfilling that spirit.

* * *

This may sound like puerile prattling. It may be thought to savor of airy preaching. But it is strictly sober sense, the alpha of everyday, workaday wisdom.

* * *

To get full measure, you must give full measure plus.

The worker who is afraid to do too much for his boss is likely to find the boss careful not to do too much for him. The man who is willing to do a little extra—all the extra he can—is apt to find a little—perhaps a lot—extra coming his way one fine day. For this is in accord with the ordained scheme of things.

* * *

Have you ever read any of John Wanamaker's personal talks on modern storekeeping? They embody not only the best sentiments, but the best sense to be found in the daily output of printers' ink. To the unthinking they may at first seem fantastic, too goody-goody, too altruistic. But a little study will reveal that they contain the essence of wisdom, that they lay down the only rules by which lasting success can be achieved.

There are so many "isms" and "ologies," so many sects and doctrines, so many panaceas flooding the world today that the old homely virtues are in danger of being buried. Be we employes or employers we will still find that the only sure road to success and to happiness lies along the path of honest, persistent, well-directed hard work and useful service.

* * *

If we tread that road and success still keep out of our reach, then we will have the consolation that at least we tried, and that if we did not attain success, we have done more—we've deserved it.

* * *

It is the mark, not the prize, that counts in the end.

Women Do Not Swallow Glittering Generalities—Even Woodrow Wilson Generalities

That Quality in Women Will Make Them Excellent Voters, Citizens and Lawmakers

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

We congratulate the women who called upon Mr. President Wilson recently and we praise their capacity—for getting down to facts.

Committees of men have gone to the President, to be assured of his high esteem, favored with lofty generalities and scholastic platitudes.

They have been told that water will not flow uphill, that the world is round, that twice two makes four, that the sum of the angles of any triangle is equal to two right angles—and they have gone home happy.

But it is not so with women. When they went to see the President and ask him how he felt about woman suffrage THEY COMPELLED HIM TO MAKE A DEFINITE STATEMENT OF HIS POSITION AND EXPOSED HIM AS AN OPPONENT OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE, refusing to accept pleasant generalizations or polite evasion.

It isn't pleasing to know that the man at the head of the United States Government considers women unfit to vote—believes them to be properly classed with idiots, Indians and children.

But it is important that women should know THE FACTS, realize that they have an opponent in the President and act accordingly.

Women will make good citizens and voters—and they will get the vote soon, by the way, in spite of Mr. Wilson and some others, largely because THEY HAVE the faculty of getting to the bottom of the matter that interests them.

In connection with the visit of the women demanding suffrage from President Wilson, it is interesting to note what a very convenient thing a "Democratic Platform" is.

It is hard to understand what Mr. Wilson could do without a platform, so useful as an excuse, so trifling as an obstacle.

You read, of course, about the women calling upon Mr. Wilson to ask him to help get a Constitutional Amendment giving the vote to women throughout the United States.

You remember that they questioned the President in a way that injured his feelings—but at the same time got the facts out of him.

You remember also that the women felt that they were treated rather abruptly when the President walked out of the room, leaving them, slamming the door behind him.

However, when women call upon a man without being invited they must take the treatment that they get. They must remember also that Mr. Wilson considers himself the President for MEN ONLY, not for Indians, children, idiots or women.

The interesting thing in Mr. Wilson's talk to the women was his statement previously made to another woman's delegation that he could do nothing about woman suffrage officially BECAUSE THE CONVENTION AT BALTIMORE HAD NOT DECLARED FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE AND HE COULD NOT PRESS IT UPON A DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS. He must not go outside of the platform, he said.

How very interesting that is, and how SINCERE it sounds!

But .. Democratic convention DID declare in favor of free passage of American coastwise shipping through the Panama Canal.

That WAS in the Democratic platform.

And Mr. Wilson himself spoke in favor of the free tolls while he was trying to get votes, and he pledged himself to the program of free passage for American ships.

Yet the same Mr. Wilson did "press upon a Democratic Congress" his desire that the free toll law should be repealed.

And that was done, and the railroads, in particular the Canadian Pacific, owned by Englishmen, were thus protected from the competition of American coastwise shipping, and the American shippers were left in the hands of the extortionate railroad organization.

Very convenient is a Democratic platform. It enables you to tell women that you cannot interest yourself in their demand for the right to vote.

And yet it does NOT prevent you from urging upon Congress the repeal of a law to which the platform, the party and the President himself were pledged.

If consistency is the virtue of little minds, President Wilson's mind is big.

The Governor Makes Another Good Appointment

The Governor's selection of John F. Meaney for a place on the Railroad Commission is very satisfactory to those who want a man with a strong sense of public service and whose legislative record has proved him to be a dependable progressive, independent, painstaking and above the reach of vulgar approach or of flattery, which is often quite as insulting to the public servant, because those who have condescended toward him usually laugh at him behind his back.

The AMERICAN believes that Mr. Meaney will be as painstaking and as loyal to the public interest on the Railroad Commission as he was in the Legislature and as he is today while the secretary and the respected friend of the Governor and of all those whose business throws them in contact with the Governor's office.

An Englishman's Letters

From J. Percy Smith-Brown, Esquire, Hotel Pazazza, Boston, to H. Therington Bellingham-Cholomondly (pronounced Chumly) The Towers, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Cirencester, near Stoke-Pennington the Lesser, Hants, England.

Dear Old Top—A most dashed extraordinary country this, old chap, and infernally odd sort of folk.

Every bally thing in the bally place is weird, but especially the stories the blighters tell. Deucedly confusing. You have to laugh at a different place in each of 'em, which makes it confoundedly difficult for anyone but a blasted native. Sometimes the stories end suddenly while you are waiting for the cursed joke—if there is one. Then all these confounded fellows sit around and watch one as if one were a bally corpse.

I fancy I jolly well spotted the joke in a story my friend, Vincent Breezer, told me yesterday. I don't see much in the story, anyway, but the funniest person seemed to think it was what these rotters call a "hoary" fancy.

I quote the bally American's words:

"A blooming Englishman was coming over to America. He was too blooming seasick to go on deck until about the fourth day out, when he managed to get up. On deck he met an English friend.

"Ha! old chap. Didn't know you were on board. Are you going over?"

"Yes, not up. Are you?"

I listened heartily at this and Breezer said: "I'm glad to see you get one joke anyway."

"Yes," I replied, "the bally beggar should have said 'across' instead of 'over.'"

"It's all off," said Breezer. "You're halfway over yourself, wherever you're going."

Deuced extraordinary, eh? I'm jolly well hanged if I ever can make out what the blighters are driving at.

As I know you are by way of being a bit of a political bloke, having once attended a dinner to a prime minister or some rotter of that kind, I thought you might be interested to know that their jolly old ruler over here, who hangs out in the Pink House or some absurd place of that kind, told a lot of business men that the slackness in trade was merely psychological. I fancy the bally business person who tried to cash a psychological cheque at his bank would find himself behind some cursedly material bars. But then I was never a political swanker like you, old cock.

Some fellow—a perfect stranger, 'pon my honour, old chap—came up to me in this bally Tremont street, and said, "I say, old cock—you don't mind my calling you old cock, do you, old cock?"

"Most certainly I do, my good man," I replied, "I haven't even met you."

Now, old cock, don't spoof. You've met me now, old cock, haven't you, old cock—if you don't mind my calling you old cock, old cock."

I went off the deep end at this. "My good man," said I, "I must insist that you refrain from addressing me."

"All right, old cock," answered the fellow, "I'll refrain from addressing you, old cock, because I don't know your blooming address, old cock—if you don't mind my calling you old cock, old cock."

At this point a lot of bounders, who had been standing close by and laughing in a vulgar manner, called out to my interrogator, "Come on, Bill, you've won your bet."

Deucedly puzzling, eh, old chap. The fellow certainly had made no bet with me.

I got a bit shirty with an American blighter the other day after he had been slating the English. "Well," said I, "my dear fellow, Britons never, never, shall be slaves. Also remember that Britannia rules the waves."

"Rights," said he, "and many a time I've wished she'd rule 'em a bit straighter."

I think I saw almost the same remark in Punch some years ago and I couldn't understand it any more at that time. Punch, anyway, has grown too infernally subtle in the last twenty years or so.

AFTER THE WEDDING

AN ILLUSTRATED STORY OF THE WAY A HOME WAS MADE

"Where have you been, Jennie?"

As Jennie and her two women acquaintances were coming out of the theatre, a man came up and spoke to her companions. They introduced him to Jennie and his first suggestion was to go to some quiet place and get a drink and something to eat.

Jennie at first demurred, saying it was getting so late and she thought she had better go home.

"What for?" asked one of the women. "Your husband is out, isn't he, so why should you hurry home?"

"All right," said Jennie, "I'll stay for a little while."

In the meantime Tom was walking the floor at home, nearly crazy, for he did not know where Jennie was, or where to look for her.

Jennie and the others went to a quiet little restaurant, where they all ordered cocktails, except Jennie, who wanted lemonade. This seemed to cause much merriment on the part of the others. Jennie tried hard to smoke a cigarette, but couldn't. The other women smoked theirs as if it was no novelty to them at all. The man seemed to know one of the women very well and sat with his arm around the back of her chair. Jennie could not help but think what Tom would say if he should come into a restaurant and find HER drinking cocktails, smoking cigarettes and with a strange man's arm around the back of her chair.

Finally Jennie said she would have to be getting home. One of the women said she would have to go also. So she and Jennie left for home.

As Jennie came into the apartment, Tom was sitting in a chair with his head in his hands looking awfully tired.

"Where have you been, Jennie?" asked Tom. "Oh, just to the theatre," answered Jennie as she brushed past him.

More About Privileges of Just Being a Woman

No More Blessed by Happy Domestic Life, but More Cursed by Unhappy One

By DOROTHY DIX

A FEW days ago I wrote an article in which I said that I had never been able to find out what were the especial and peculiar privileges of being a woman that we hear so much about, and which women are reported to be in danger of losing if they persist in their efforts to get the ballot.

A man has taken the trouble to answer it. He says:

"Is it not a privilege for a woman to be a mother? Is it not a privilege to have the love that a mother has for a child, and to see that child become one of the great men of the world?

"Is it not a privilege for a woman to die with her children by her bedside?

"Is it not a privilege to have a good husband to love?

"Is it not a privilege to have the honor and respect of your husband?

"Is there anything better in this wide world than the love of a husband and child?"

Surely, oh, brother. But—

Is it not just as much a privilege to be a father as it is to be a mother?

Is it not just as much a privilege to have the love that a father has for a child as a mother has?

Is it not just as much a gratification to a father to see his son one of the great men of the world as it is to a mother?

Is it not as much of a privilege for a man to die with his children by his bedside, blessing him, as it is for a woman to die that way?

Is it not just as much a privilege to have a good wife to love as it is to have a good husband?

Is it not just as much a privilege for a man to have the honor and respect of his wife as it is for a woman to have the honor and respect of her husband?

Is there anything better in this wide world for a man to have than the love of wife and child?

What a silly argument! A woman is no more blessed by a happy domestic life than a man is, although she is more cursed by a miserable one, because a man has the distinction of his business and of outside interests to take his mind off his troubles. If he has made an unfortunate marriage, whereof a woman's world is bounded by her home, and she must find either joy or misery in that.

To have a good husband, a good home and splendid children is certainly a privilege, but it is not a privilege that is dependent upon sex.

My correspondent goes on to state that he considers it a great privilege for a woman to be dependent on a man. That is according to the point of view. Personally, I have never known a single woman who did not yearn, with unspeakable longing, for a little financial independence of her own, or who enjoyed going to her husband and asking him for every nickel she spent.

Doubtless my correspondent thinks that he supports his wife. Doubtless his wife thinks that the woman who performs all the manifold labors and duties of wife and mother earns her board and keep, and is a self-supporting member of the community.

But it is one of the average woman's undisputed privileges to get neither appreciation nor pay for her labor.

Of course, in a general and optimistic way, it's a privilege to be alive at all, to have enough to eat, to have reasonably good health, to have the natural human affections and relations, and we should all be thankful for said privileges, but such blessings are no especial privileges of women.

How to Measure the Distanee of Stars

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"How measure the distances between the earth and the stars and planets?"—J. C., a reader.

A.—To measure the distances of the stars, the diameter of the orbit of the earth, a line about 186,000,000 miles long is the only one that astronomers have for a base line. Any triangle can be solved when three parts, one being a side, are given. The diameter of the orbit of the earth is known with great accuracy—185,773,834 miles.

Two angles, at intervals of half a year, are measured, giving directions of the star from the earth in its two positions. Then the triangle is at once computed. But the entire 185,773,834 miles is so exceedingly short, as seen from even the nearest star, that it is about as difficult to measure as is the diameter of a spider's thread.

And it required 100 years of hard work to make instruments fine enough to measure stellar angles. Then it was found that the nearest star is distant 25,500,000,000,000 miles.

To measure the distances of the planets is easy in comparison. Measure the angles from the earth and sun to all the planets and solve. This requires many years of accurate measuring.

But this gigantic work can be dispensed with by merely watching the times required for all the planets to revolve around the sun. All that has then to be done is to square those times and extract the cube roots of the squares. These roots are true distances of all of the planets in terms of the earth's distance from the sun.

Those relative distances were known before the earth's distance in miles had been measured. Thus it was known that Jupiter is 5.2 times farther from the sun that the earth so long before it was known that the earth's distance is 92,885,913 miles.

The Christian Science Side

Committee on Publication
The First Church of Christ Scientist,
Norway and St. Paul Streets,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I am glad to acknowledge the perfect fairness of the AMERICAN'S report of a recent decision of a New York court in the case of a Christian Science practitioner. But now that the opinions of the judges have been read in full, I trust you will make room for a brief comment.

The several opinions in this case consume thirty-nine sheets of typewriting, but the gist of the whole decision can be put in a few words. Although the present decision is not final, the majority of the judges have ruled to the following effect. It is allowable to practice religious tenets which include healing, unless the practitioner presides at office or place for the work and receives payment from those who offer it. If he does this he must have a license to practice medicine.

It is to be observed, therefore, that this judgment rests wholly upon the alleged impropriety of receiving compensation for a service rendered. On the other hand, the former chief justice of the highest court in New York (Edgar Montgomery Cullen) recently said in a public address: "In all Christian churches prayers are offered for the recovery of the sick, and all decent Christians, Friends possibly excepted, believe in supporting their clergymen. The Christian Scientist has exactly the same right to be paid for his service."

Which of these views is correct may be debated by judges, but the ultimate right of decision belongs to a larger court. If the present ruling correctly interprets the law of New York, and the statutes as thus construed do not conform to the sense of justice held by the people, the law can be changed and will be changed.

A very large percentage of Christian Science healing is done without compensation, and Christian Science has been commercialized to exactly the same extent that Christianity was commercialized in the days of Christ Jesus. When He sent out His disciples to preach the gospel and heal the sick, He said: "The laborer is worthy of his hire." The difference between the compensation which they received pursuant to this instruction and precept is simply a difference in the conditions of human life then and now, there and here; that is to say, a difference in the manner or medium of payment.

Christian healing is just as much entitled to compensation when done in an office convenient to Broadway, as when done in a Judean synagogue or at the gates of Lystra.

Yours truly,
CLIFFORD P. SMITH.
